MOVE AGAINST ITALY SEEN AS TENSION GROWS

Berlin Protests Closing of Consulates as Violation Of Treaty.

CAPITAL AWAITS NOTE

Washington Watches For Formal Action Against Nazis On Robin Moor.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A strong German protest on the expulsion of Nazi consuls from the United States was delivered to the state department today, and Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, indicated it would be flatly rejected.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Mutual charges of treaty violation further embittered German-American relations today as President Roosevelt indicated that some move against Italy was imminent.

The deterioration of relations between Washington and Berlin continued while the capital awaited this government's formal protest to Germany against the torpedoing of the American steamer Robin Moor.

Refusing to connect that incident with any plans for arming merchant ships, Mr. Roosevelt said yesterday that he supposed every chief of naval operations since 1918 has formulated plans for mounting guns on merchant vessels for their defense and that the navy has such plans for doing so now if it were deemed necessary.

So far as the president is concerned, he added, those plans for arming merchant vessels are in navy safes. He said he didn't know whether congressional authorization would be needed to take such action.

In the past 96 hours the United states government has frozen German and Italian credits in the United States, ordered the closing of German consulates and semi-official agencies and expulsion of their Nazi employes and, finally, closed American borders to departure of German nationals.

Asked at his press conference whether action would be taken against consulates and semi-official agencies of other countries, president Roosevelt replied not today with emphasis on the word "today," suggesting that

DIVERT TANKERS

Ickes Announces Move to Aid Oil Shortage In East.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— In the first positive move to alleviate the oil shortage on the east coast, Petroleum Coordinator Ickes today announced that a diversion of tankers has been arranged which will increase gasoline shipments by more than 5,000,000 barrels a year.

As a result of conferences between Ickes and officials of the Sun Oil company and the Standard Oil company of California, tankers now engaged in routes between California and east coast ports will be switched to runs between gulf ports and the east coast.

This arrangement, it is said, will cut the length of the run by more than half, and more than double the amount of gasoline and oil the tankers will be able to haul. The switch will have the effect of adding the equivalent of three more tankers to the east coast oil hauling trade.

BOOSTED AGAIN

Crude Oil Price Raised For Fourth Time This Year.

PITTSBURGH —(U.P.)— An increase of 20 cents a barrel in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil, the fourth boost to be made this year, was announced today by the Joseph Seep purchasing agency of the Southwest Pennsylvania pipe lines.

The new price, effective today, are: Bradord and Alleghany, $2.75 per barrel; Southwest, $2.40; Eureka, $2.34. No change was made on Corning grade, which is selling for $1.31.

Plymouth Girl Back In Home Town To Wed Vanderbilt-Whitney Scion

Miss Eleanor Searle Married Today In Surprise Ceremony

Miss Eleanor Searle, daughter of a prominent Plymouth family, who attained fame in the music world, came back to her home town in northern Richland county today to become the bride of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, grandson of Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt and scion of one of America's wealthiest families.

The wedding ceremony was read at noon in the First Lutheran church in Plymouth which was founded 101 years ago by the bride's great-grandfather, Felix Fenner.

The marriage was a complete surprise even to Plymouth, a village of 1,400, where only a few members of the immediate family and intimate friends knew of the couple's plans.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George J. Searle of Plymouth and a sister of Dr. G. J. Searle, jr., of Mansfield. She is nationally known as an operatic and concert singer and an NBC radio artist. At present she is soprano soloist at the North Avenue Presbyterian church in New Rochelle, N. Y. During the season of 1939 she sang with the St. Louis Municipal opera, appearing in "The Firefly," "Rose Marie," "Katinka," and other light operas.

Mr. Whitney is the son of the late Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. He is chairman of the board of Pan American Airways, Inc., a director of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, president of the American Arbitration association, chairman of the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting company, and a director and officer of other corporations.

He is internationally known for his work in aviation, as the owner of fine race horses, and sports enthusiast.

Mr. Whitney has been twice married. His first wife was the former Marie Norton of New York City, whom he married in Paris, France, in 1923. They were divorced in 1929. Their children are Harry Payne, 15, and Nancy Whitney, 13. Mr. Whitney has a daughter Gail, 2, by his second wife, the former Gwladys Hopkins

REPORT 8 CIO UNIONS SET TO BACK PURGE

OPM Gets Assurances From Over Million Workers On Anti-Red Drive.

HILLMAN GETS WORD

Steel Workers Expected to Join Others In Drive On Subversives.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Eight CIO unions, having some 1,225,000 members, today were reported by labor officials to have given assurances to OPM Director Sidney Hillman that they will back any drive to purge alleged communists and radicals from the CIO.

Total CIO membership is variously estimated at between 3,300,000 and 5,000,000.

The unions who have joined a drive by conservative CIO leaders against alleged subversive interests which are accused in some quarters of fomenting the recent wave of national defense strikes, are:

Hillman's own Amalgamated Clothing Workers, with an estimated 270,000 members; Textile Workers, 325,000; United Automobile Workers, 485,000; United Rubber Workers, 65,000; Retail and Wholesale Workers, 25,000; Marine and Shipbuilders, 67,000; Flat Glass Workers, 25,000; and Marine Engineers, 15,000.

It is regarded as significant in labor circles that both R. J. Thomas, head of the UAW and Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the UAW's aircraft division, conferred with Hillman within the past two days although Hillman's office said they were only "courtesy calls."

In addition, the conservative leaders, it is learned, are counting on strong factions in the electrical workers, the steel workers organizing committee, and the American newspaper guild to back their drive.

Although Hillman is no longer an international vice president of CIO and is on leave as president of the Amalgamated, the conservative leaders in the CIO are rallying around him because he is head of the OPM's labor division.

Hillman is described by close friends as keenly disappointed in the statement of Philip Murray, president of the CIO, who denied that there is any "split, purge or red-hunts" in the CIO. These

TRASH PILES UP

Mayor Won't Act as Garbage Clogs Alleys, Streets.

McKEESPORT, Pa.—(AP)—With garbage and trash piling higher and higher in alleys, streets and vacant lots and striking municipal service workers flatly rejecting a peace plan, this industrial center of 57,000 persons studied ways and means today of "carrying on" its normal business.

The service workers—garbage collectors, street cleaners and maintenance men—struck Sunday night, demanding pay boosts and union recognition.

The mayor, head of the city for 28 years, was insistent that he would not deal with the union, saying he lacked the legal authority to make a contract with it—a statement union leaders quickly denied.

Report British Smashed In Big Salum Battle

Middle East Headquarters Admit That Empire Forces Withdraw to Former Positions; Fighting Continues Near Damascus; Coast Bombed.

BULLETIN

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt — (UP) — Axis aircraft attacked Alexandria for 65 minutes early today, but were driven off by heavy anti-aircraft fire after dropping bombs on the outskirts of the city.

(By Associated Press)

Germany and Italy reported "complete and overwhelming victory" today in smashing a British counter-offensive after a violent three-day battle in the desert around Salum, Egypt.

"The enemy, overwhelmed, is retreating," the German high command said.

An Italian war bulletin declared the British had thrown "ponderous masses of tanks supported by the best part of the Middle Eastern air force" into the conflict—only to be rushed by the "overpowering impetus" of Axis counter-attacks.

British Middle East headquarters acknowledged that British advance forces—which had knifed as deep as 40 miles into Libya—had withdrawn to "forward positions" on the Libyan front.

This presumably meant that the British had fallen back to their original positions from which the drive was launched.

The withdrawal was executed, the British said, to avoid an encircling movement by German reinforcements rushed from the Tobruk area and because "we had accomplished our object" of making the Germans disclose their strength.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said the British used "hundreds of American tanks," mostly the newest type known as "Mark Two."

The news agency said the British also used strong forces of motorized troops and a great quantity of artillery and air strength.

Capture of "several hundred German prisoners" and the destruction of large numbers of Axis tanks and guns was officially reported by the British.

The Fascist communique asserted that Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's counter-offensive had been "broken," with British troops retreating under heavy fire by Axis land and air forces.

The communique declared that severe losses had been inflicted on the British, especially in tanks, and that the battle was ended.

London dispatches said the British had captured Fort Capuzzo, just inside the Libyan frontier from Egypt, and had encountered "serious opposition."

In Berlin, Hitler's high command said that the British attempt to drive back into Libya had been "frustrated with extremely heavy British losses" and that imperial troops were retreating under Axis counter-attack in the Salum area.

Ankara Hears Hitler Angered At Lack of Supplies From Russia.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — A reliable Turkish source reported today that Germany and Turkey have concluded a non-aggression pact. It was reported that under the pact Turkey safeguards all her rights and obligations under the Anglo-Turkish alliance.

(By United Press)

ANKARA, Turkey — (Delayed) —A diplomatic informant said tonight he had confirmed reports that a grim bargaining battle was proceeding between Germany and Russia and that this was the reason for the troop concentrations on the German-Russian frontiers.

Wild rumors circulated here and at Istanbul of forceful action by the Germans.

Telephone communication between Turkey and Sofia and other European towns has been interrupted and it is reported that telephone service has been interrupted between Sofia and Bucharest, on one hand, and Berlin on the other.

Baron Franz Von Papen, German ambassador here, conferred for an hour this afternoon with Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu.

The diplomatic informant said Adolf Hitler was angry at Russia because Russia had provided only between 10 and 15 per cent of the supplies it had promised him. Hitler was represented to have informed Russia that

ORDER FURNACES

Republic Steel To Increase Output By 122,000 Tons Annually.

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— Republic Steel corporation today ordered two new 50-ton electric furnaces to be installed at its Canton plant.

The installation will increase the company's capacity by 122,000 tons annually. The present capacity of 727,000 tons makes Republic the biggest producer of electric furnace steel, used in the manufacture of airplane motors and light armor plate.

URGES ACTION

Senator Urges U. S. to Build Own Aluminum Plants.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Government construction and operation of aluminum plants was advocated today by Senator Connally (D.-Tex.) as the senate defense investigating committee attempted to force immediate action to increase facilities for production of the vital aircraft metal.

Connally said he was convinced that the quickest way to obtain a substantial boost in the present inadequate output was for the government to build a plant at some such site as that owned by the Aluminum Company of America at Fontana on the Little Tennessee river in North Carolina.

The government could operate the plant in co-operation with ALCOA, he said, and have it as a stand-by facility after the present need passes.

READY TO ARM MERCHANTMEN

U. S. Prepared to Act Against Threat of Submarines After Sinking.

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt left no doubt today that the United States was ready, if necesary, to arm her merchantmen to meet the threat of submarine warfare.

Whether such action would be taken, informed sources said, probably would depend to a great degree on the attitude Germany takes when Berlin receives the state department's forthcoming protest over the sinking of the American Merchantman Robin Moor by a submarine in the South Atlantic.

The question of arming the merchant vessels was raised at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference yesterday. The president was asked whether any thought had been given to the subject after the torpedoing of the Robin Moor.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that the United States had plans ready for arming her merchantmen — and had them ready since 1918.

Relatives of Gov. Bricker Injured In Mishap Near Here

Gov. John W. Bricker's sister-in-law and niece Mrs. Helen Day and her daughter, Sally, were injured two and a half miles south of Loudonville on the Three C highway yesterday when a lumber truck owned by J. A. Reeder, Butler, R. D. 1, failed to make a corner and turned over on their car.

The six-year-old girl suffered a fractured leg and Mrs. Day cuts and bruises. Both are in Mansfield General hospital and nurses report their condition as "good" today.

They were two of the nine people injured yesterday in accidents near Mansfield. In another accident Julius D. Monaco, 23, of Youngstown tried to pass a truck two and a half miles south of Johnsville on U. S. route 42 and collided with a car driven by Eugene P. Williams, 64, of Geneva, Ohio, said state highway patrolmen. All of the injured were taken to the Mansfield General hospital where they were treated for cuts and bruises and released. Injured in Monaco's car, all from Youngstown, were: Judy Lischak, 21; Pearl Monaco, 25; Mrs. Rose Monaco, 60; and Madeline Bengivengo, 51.

Those in Williams' car, all from Geneva, were Eugene Williams, 64; Harold Williams, 21; and Mrs. Grace Williams, 61.

BIGGEST FLEET

Knox Says U. S. Sea Power to Be Twice History's Largest.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Warning that the world will be a disturbed world "for a long time to come," Secretary of Navy Knox today told congress that the United States is building a fleet twice as big as any in history and one which "will command all the waters of the western hemisphere and both oceans at once if necessary."

"I don't know how long the war will last, but I do know that the need for control of the seas will exist for a long time," the cabinet member declared.

Knox appeared before the house rivers and harbors committee urging speedy approval of the $300,000,000 St. Lawrence waterway project. He stressed the advantage of having shipbuilding facilities in the Great Lakes area.

DENIES RETURN TO DEM HELM

Brunner, Leaving HOLC, Says He Won't Take Chairmanship Of State Committee.

Henry G. Brunner, Mansfield, who resigned Monday as manager of the Home Owners Loan corporation in Ohio, denied today that he will become Democratic chairman in Ohio again following his retirement from the HOLC post in 60 or 90 days.

It was reported in Columbus that Brunner, who headed the party in Ohio from 1928 to 1932, was in Washington yesterday to confer with the Ohio Democratic congressional delegation to confer on a proposal that he assume the state chairmanship.

J. Freer Bittinger of Ashland, present chairman, has denied any intention of resigning, it was understood, but it was reported he may receive a federal appointment to leave the chairmanship open for Brunner.

Brunner, in an interview in Columbus, said he would under no circumstances take the chairmanship again. He indicated he may return to Mansfield to engage in business, but he declined to comment on the nature of the business.

Charles A. Jones, general chairman of HOLC in Washington, praised Brunner for his work in directing the federal agency in Ohio. The state HOLC office will be closed and its business transferred to the Cincinnati office.

City's State Guard Unit to Begin Drilling Next Month

Mansfield's state guard unit, Company F, will begin drilling the first week in July along with other units throughout the state, Capt. Glenn L. Bierly of Company F said today.

Forty men had enlisted today in the home guard company here and Capt. Bierly said he hoped to have the full company of 50 by the end of the week. Enlistments are being received by Capt. Bierly and Lieuts. H. D. Moorhead and R. B. Schoenman.

When the company organizes within the next two weeks, it will have, in addition to Capt. Bierly and two lieutenants, a first sergeant, mess sergeant, supply sergeant, two platoon sergeants, five corporals, a bugler, two cooks, and 36 riflemen.

There will be two platoons of two squads each. A squad will consist of 10 men instead of the customary eight.

The Mansfield company is expected to go to Camp Perry about mid-August for eight days or two weeks of training. Until then the men will drill at the Mansfield Armory.

Capt. Bierly said today that employers of the enlisted men so far have shown a favorable attitude toward the guard unit and indicated they will grant members leave-of-absence for the training period in August.

Police Comb Washington In Hunt for Brutal Sex Slayer

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The capital's most vicious crime in more than a decade, the brutal rape-slaying of pretty 23-year-old Jessie Elizabeth Strieff, spurred police today into a manhunt extending through the entire city.

Capt. Ira Keck, acting detective chief, ordered a roundup of men previously arrested in connection with sex crimes, while a reinforced homicide squad of 14 crack detectives ran down scores of tips and rumors.

Authorities admitted, however, that they still were without worthwhile clues to the slayer of the war department stenographer, who disappeared Sunday afternoon. Her nude body was found Monday morning in a private garage several blocks from her home.

She had been raped and strangled, a coroner's report said. Missing were the blue raincoat and playsuit Miss Strieff was wearing when she left home to go to a nearby store, and police squads combed sewers, trash heaps and garbage collections in an effort to locate them.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, offered a reward of $500 for information leading to the slayer's arrest and conviction; the Washington Time-Herald offered $1,000.

AXIS REPORT BRITISH BEATEN IN SALUM FIGHT

Claims Counter-Offensive Smashed, Empire Army Admits Retreat.

the British offensive as an attempt to rescue the siege-bound British garrison at Tobruk, 80 miles inside Libya, where British troops have been encircled for nearly 10 weeks.

A Nazi spokesman said that Gen. Wavell had thrown "large panzer reserves" into the battle and that heavy fighting raged in the Halfaya ("Hell-Fire") Pass sector, east of Salum.

"The fighting has been extremely bitter," the Nazi spokesman said, "but despite enemy preparations, German and Italian forces are holding up the drive. English losses have been great."

The Germans claimed destruction of more than 100 British tanks since the imperial army of the Nile began its offensive Sunday.

On the Middle East war front, the British reported that Allied columns were attacking the town of Mezze, three miles west of Damascus, the capital of Syria, and that Allied patrols had reached a point only 12 miles from Beirut, the Lebanese capital.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French troops were said to be exerting strong pressure on the 10-mile road from Kissoue to Damascus, south of the city.

Elsewhere, the British acknowledged that counter-attacking Vichy French troops had recaptured the Syrian towns of Merdjayoun, six miles from the Palestine frontier, and Kuneitra, south of Damascus.

The British declared that the French counter-attack, carried out in force with armored units and fierce Druse cavalry, had been halted and that the situation was "well in hand."

In the war in the air, the London air ministry reported that big squadrons of RAF bombers, smashing at western Germany for the seventh night in a row, set many fires and inflicted widespread destruction in the industrial cities of Cologne and Duesseldorf.

Reinforced by a stream of American-built planes, the RAF also challenged German air might by sending at least 150 planes flying in "sandwich formation" — with layers of fighters flying above and below the bombers—against the Nazi-held French coast.

RAF overnight attacks centered on the docks at Rotterdam, Ostend, Boulogne and Cherbourg, the British announced, and in a series of flaming dogfights high over the English channel 13 German planes were reported shot down. Ten RAF planes were listed as missing.

In Berlin, the Germans claimed the destruction of 23 British aircraft with the loss of only a single Nazi plane.

Against the hour when Hitler's aerial invaders may strike at the island kingdom, nearly 100,000 British troops supported by tanks and 10 air squadrons completed a successful defense against a three-day "mock invasion" attempt in Sussex and west Kent.

Two Canadian divisions joined British armored and infantry divisions in opposing huge formations of English Tommies representing parachute troops and air-borne forces such as Hitler exploited in the conquest of Crete.

Meanwhile, the mystery of German-Russian relations became even more complex as dispatches from Helsinki told of the reported exodus of Russian troops from the military base at Hanko, Finland. The U. S. S. R. had a 30-year lease on the strategic base.

"Eye-witnesses reported seeing long Soviet trains . . ." the Helsinki correspondent began to describe the exodus, and at that point his telephone communication with the outside world was suddenly cut off.

Amid the widening political rift between the United States and Germany, President Roosevelt left no doubt that this country was ready, if necessary, to arm American merchant ships to meet the threat of Nazi U-boat warfare.

In Berlin, tension over U. S. relations increased as Germany protested sharply against President Roosevelt's order padlocking all Nazi consulates in the United States.

The text of the protest note, when it would be delivered, and the nature of counter-measures planned by the reich were not disclosed.

In Washington, government officials declared tighter control over immigration would be instituted before July 1, following up orders barring the departure "pending further instructions" of German nationals now in the United States.

Report Vast Numbers Of Nazis in Finland

LONDON—(INS)—German troops are reaching Finland in such large numbers "that it is clear they are taking up permanent positions," the ministry of economic warfare announced today.

As a result, it was said, granting of navicerts for ships bound for Petsamo has been suspended since June 14. Three Finnish ships are now under detention.

henceforth he would expect not merely all that had been promised but all, in addition, that Germany needed and that if he did not get it his troops would go and take it.

The informant gave it as his own opinion that Russia would give in rather than fight and might even permit a certain degree of German control over Russian communications, oil, mineral production and agriculture, screened by a corps of "consultants" who would be sent to Russia.

Other well informed diplomatic sources said that though the Russians were attempting to resist German pressure by making counter-demonstrations on the frontier, it was estimated that about one-third of the Russian army was so badly equipped that it was almost useless, and that only one-third of Russia's estimated 5,000 airplanes were fit for first line use.

As for some of the reasons behind the reported German threats to Russia, it has been reported that the Rumanian harvest will be the poorest in 10 years. It was said that instead of having an export surplus of food, Rumania would not have enough for its own needs and that already there was a severe shortage of potatoes, meat, fats and onions.

Mother-In-Law Problem Solved In Novel Fashion

CHICAGO —(INS)— A solution of the mother-in-law problem was advanced—but not recommended—today by Alexander Spoehr, assistant curator of American Ethnology and Archaeology at the Field Museum of Natural History.

"A Crow Indian," he said, avoids his mother-in-law, and she shuns him with equal thoroughness.

"He does not speak to her and in conversation does not mention her name.

"This is not because they dislike each other—on the contrary, they respect, and may like each other very much. Their avoidance is simply one way of preventing conflict."

SCIENTIST DISCOVERS A NEW METHOD OF MAKING GLYCERINE

COLUMBUS—(INS)—A new and "potentially cheaper" method of synthetically producing glycerine—a vital material in the manufacture of explosives—has been invented by Dr. Richard S. Shutt, head of the industrial and scientific research division of the Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus.

Dr. Shutt's process refines glycerine from gaseous petroleum by-products which now have only limited use. These by-product gases, which are turned into liquids by cooling, are available in millions of gallons per year and could be used to produce a practically unlimited amount of glycerine, Dr. Shutt pointed out.

Immediate commercial application of the process is not expected on a wide scale, the scientist said. However, he declared that its current value is that it provides another source of glycerine for use "in an emergency."

The process, Dr Shutt said, depends upon the use of a rare chemical compound as a catalyst, yields no undesirable by-products and eliminates high temperature chlorination, common to other synthetic methods of glycerine manufacture. Nature of the rare catalyst was not revealed.

Principal source of glycerine at present is purified animal and vegetable fats.

Dr. Shutt formerly was associated with the E. I. DuPont de Nemours and company in their experimental station.

Invents a New 'Mummy Sack' For Army Camps

OAKLAND, Cal.—(INS)—Army camps throughout the colder parts of the nation are awaiting shipments of a new type sleeping bag designed by an Oakland attorney, Bestor Robinson.

The "mummy sack" weighs about four pounds, rolls up into a small parcel, and is equipped with a zipper so that everything but the sleeper's nose may be encased in warm, soft down.

The army is manufacturing them in large lots Some have already been tested successfully in northern camps.

CHARGES STRAIN RELATIONS OF U. S., GERMANY

Move Against Italy Seen as Nazis Protest Closing Of Consulates.

some move was imminent. He refused to amplify the charges of improper and unwarranted action made against German consular and semi-official agencies officials except to say that they were of a cumulatively subversive character.

The order to customs and immigration officers "to take all necessary steps to prevent any German national departing from the United States pending any further instructions" was explained as a move to prevent individuals secretly taking funds across the border in violation of the regulations freezing assets. It will have the effect until modified, however, of preventing German nationals from leaving the United States for any reason.

Treasury ofifcials expect to complete compilation of Axis credits and regulations governing them under the freezing order by the July 10 deadline for departure of German consuls. The closing of borders thus was not expected to interfere with their departure. Instead it would have the effect of assuring that they will leave empty-handed—without any of the frozen German assets.

Germany's official DNB agency announced in Berlin that a sharp protest had been made to the United States against closing of Nazi consulates here. The dispatch said the action was "unjustified and arbitrary" and a "treaty violation."

Italy having acted promptly to freeze United States assets in reprisal against action here, Virginia Gayda, Fascist editorial spokesman, asserted that the American order amounted to a declaration of economic war against Germany and Italy. Germany has not yet frozen American assets in that country but has promised that the recent aggressive diplomatic moves by Mr. Roosevelt will not be ignored.

Say Protest Does Not Close Incident

BERLIN —(U.P.)— An authorized spokesman said today that the closing of German consulates in America "cannot be regarded as a closed incident by the German protest."

The spokesman said no reply to the German protest had been received here. His statement that the protest would not close the matter was made in reply to a question by a foreign press correspondent.

Well informed quarters said that Washington reports of orders preventing German nationals from leaving the United States without authorization had reached Berlin, but that their implication was "indefinite." There can be no immediate comment or forecast of German retaliation, it was said.

Details of German retaliation against freezing of Axis assets in the United States will be issued later, informed quarters said.

It was pointed out that in practise American residents of Germany, as all other foreigners in the reich, have been affected by measures introduced shortly after the outbreak of war and which forbid foreigners to leave the country without an exit permit. During recent months a number of Americans, including several newspapermen, have experienced delays of from six to eight weeks in obtaining exit permits.

So far as was known, however, there have been no cases in which permits were refused.

Good Fellows Carry On Club For 100 Years

NEW ORLEANS—(U.P.)—A large white building, situated in one of the busiest blocks on broad Canal street, soon will ring to the toasts of frock-coated merrymakers and the boys in ordinary business suits.

It's the home of the Boston club—a men's group organized 100 years ago and dedicated to good fellowship. It was founded in 1841 and reputedly is the third oldest club of its type in the United States.

The club is noted for many things—not the least of which is its bit of garden and lawn in the heart of the city's business district. Women probably won't be allowed to attend the celebration—the members' wives get in only once a year, at Mardi Gras. They have to come through the club to reach the special stand where celebrities witness the parades.

Membership is not restricted to local men. There are several members who come to the city during the year on business and like a place to relax besides their hotel room.

friends believed that John L. Lewis, head of the powerful United Mine Workers and former CIO president, helped Murray draft it. There has been a growing coolness between Hillman and Lewis, according to informed labor observers.

The OPM labor division director, labor officials disclosed, has informed Murray that this country cannot hope to keep its production at full speed and "beat Hitler" if subversive elements are tolerated in the CIO.

OLD IDEA

HARRISBURG, Pa.—(U.P.)—Compulsory military training is not a new idea in Pennsylvania.

From March 17, 1777, when the Pennsylvania militia was organized, until the Civil War, every "free, able-bodied, white, male adult between the ages of 18 and 53 residing in the Commonwealth" was compelled to enroll in the militia or be fined in accordance with laws passed by successive legislatures.

MONOPOLY

AUTOPSY ON MUMMY

NEW YORK — (INS) — Wah, a 4,000-year-old Egyptian mummy belonging to the American Museum of Natural History, was recently subjected to an autopsy performed by Dr Harry Shapiro, associate curator of anthropology at the museum. Dr. Shapiro deduced that Wah died at the age of thirty.

MORE JOBS

IOWA CITY, Ia. — (INS) — The University of Iowa had more campus jobs available for second semester students this year than at any time in the last five years. Many students earlier signed for work failed to fulfill job contracts, a situation which Lee Kann, student employment bureau manager, says "probably arose from uncertainty" regarding the draft.

READY TO ARM MERCHANTMEN

U. S. Prepared to Act Against Threat of Submarines After Sinking.

"Have they come out of the safe yet?", a reporter inquired.

Mr. Rosevelt said not at his request, and let it go at that.

He said he did not know whether congressional authority would be needed to order the arming of the merchant marine.

President Roosevelt prefererd to say nothing yesterday on the sinking of the Robin Moor—first American ship torpedoed in the present war. He disclosed, however, that he had read the survivors' report on which the state department based its charge that a Nazi U-boat was responsible for the sinking.

The state department, meanwhile, considered its case against Germany complete in the Robin Moor incident. It was indicated that the testimony of the 11 survivors who landed in Brazil was ample, but the corroborating evidence of the 35 missing survivors who reached South Africa Monday will also be studied before a note of protest is drafted.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 18, 1941.

The toughest customer in these days is the young fellow who doesn't think his country has ever done anything for him.

Youthful Shipwreck Hero

THE STORY of stout-hearted, two-year-old Robbin McCullough deserves a second thought.

Piled into a lifeboat with 11 other survivors of the torpedoed American ship Robin Moor, the youngster who not so long ago was a Mansfield visitor, relished the hard tack and enjoyed the antics of the sharks. He was unafraid.

Because he was unafraid he had fun out of an adventure that must at times have chilled older hearts. And because he was unafraid he certainly lightened the minds and probably strengthened the spirit of those who were with him. It is idle to say this American youngster did not understand the dangers around him. America became great through the efforts of those who did not understand the dangers they faced or those who, understanding, ignored them.

The 11 others in that tiny boat said Robbin was the hero of the adventure. They know.

Vacationing Time

SUMMER comes, school closes, vacation time begins. There will be less vacation this summer than usual, because of our frenzied defense preparations and the millions of people absorbed by army and industry and occupations connected with them. Yet many people will have short vacations, and some lucky dogs will get long ones as usual.

Where to go? What to do? There are the faithful ones who throng contentedly to the same places, to do the same things, summer after summer. And there are the nomadic and adventurous ones who always want to see new places and meet new people and do new things. The former may live longer but the latter probably have more fun.

The supreme vacationer never ceases in his desire to go everywhere and see everything and do everything, while life lasts and the sun rises and sets and the world turns on its axis. And some rare souls, condemned to a stay-at-home or stay-at-work existence, possibly even to spend life in a chair or a bed, are the best travelers of all, because they have inexhaustible imagination. Many who gad about endlessly get little out of it for lack of that quality.

Sheep Counting – a New Way

WHEN a newspaper man takes time off to invent an automatic sheep-counter, that's probably news. A city editor in Texas has performed this feat.

There is an endless line of sheep jumping over a fence, in the traditional way, but operated by a clock-like gadget that is fastened to the foot of the bed. As the weary insomniac presses a button and settles down and grits his teeth and says to himself that now he will go to sleep—he will, he will, he will—why the sheep start obediently jumping over a little, illuminated fence, making it easier for him to do his counting. And so, sooner or later, he drops off. That is the theory, anyway. And the city editor is hopefully getting the thing patented.

What happens after the weary counter goes to sleep is not told. Perhaps the sheep go right on just the same, doing their stuff, until the sleeper wakes up and says good morning to them. That is about what sheep would do.

Many people, though, will have their doubts about the whole business. Do people really count sheep when they're sleepless? Have any of us ever done it, or known anyone who did? It may be only a tradition.

Victorious Machines

MACHINERY will win the war, if Britain can hold off the enemy until American machines and mechanics have a chance to show what they can do. Fred H. Chapin, head of the National Acme Company, who is well acquainted with the industry in Germany, says our industry is equipped to turn out five times as many machine tools as can be made by the Germans.

Our defense bottleneck, he explains, is in the lack of plants in which to place the new tools, and in getting workers to operate the machines. The plants are being built and the workers are being trained, but it takes time. There will be many opportunities here for young fellows now coming out of school, especially the graduates of technical high schools.

"NIAGARA HONEYMOON"

Washington's Lighter Side

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—If any proof is needed that there is humor yet in the international situation, it may be found in the off-the-record stories from that junket which the Latin-American admirals recently were accorded in a coast-to-coast survey of United States defenses.

Here are some of the first-hand yarns which leaked out after the admirals returned to Washington and bid adios:

The two chartered airliners and the two transport planes (which carried the party's luggage) were flying in formation over the Grand Canyon.

As one member of the group expressed it, there is nothing so staggering as the "perpendicular beauty" of the Canyon which seems to drop into nowhere with only multi-colored cathedral spires and turreted castles of mile-high rock to mark its dizzy descents.

Among others gazing down into the canyon's awesome depths was Vice-Admiral Gustavo Shroder, of Uruguay (the same who was in command of Montevideo harbor when the crippled Graf Spee limped in and who notified the Nazi commander that he had better be off pronto or else the Uruguayan navy would have itself a fine new German battleship).

When the vice-admiral coughed and hemmed and hawed, an American officer stepped to his side and drawing his conclusion from the terrific bumpiness of the air over the canyon, asked the admiral if he were ill.

"Not at all," Admiral Shroder replied, still staring down. "I was just thinking what inconvenient country to be in with only a bicycle."

One night about halfway through the 24-day junket, the American officers held a conference to discuss how things were going. One of the chief officers presided. He had spent many years in Peru and had traveled extensively elsewhere in South America, so it was with some testiness that he answered the navy medical officer who complained that the Latin-Americans were being subjected to too much stiffness and formality.

"The trouble with you," said the presiding officer, 'is that you don't know Latin-Americans. I'm giving them what they like."

It was four days before anyone had the heart to tell the presiding officer that he had been talking to a half-Puerto Rican who had been born, reared and had worked for years in the Caribbean, and whose father was unadulterated Spanish-American.

In Hollywood, the visiting admirals were given a typical Hollywood reception—glamour and all. Norma Shearer was Hostess No. 1. Carmen Miranda (Aie-yi-yi) was there and dozens of others of filmdom's most beauteous. And all the admirals were there except Commodore Coello of Mexico, who had many friends in Los Angeles and was spending the evening with them.

One of the studios took pictures and the next morning presented the admirals with a fancy picture book, showing photos of them with their beautiful hostesses. Commodore Coello, looking over one of the books, said: "Well, had I known—."

One of his confreres commented wryly: "Count yourself lucky, my friend. When we get home you probably will be the only one of us whose wife will not break his head."

The stock joke of the trip was: "Where's the fleet?" because although the visitors were in this country 24 days, the only operating ships they visited were Vincent Astor's yacht in the Atlantic —and the ferry that plies between San Diego and Coronado Island. When they walked across the gangplank to the ferryboat, one of the admirals, eyes twinkling, spread his legs into a stance and announced with gusto: "Ah, it's good for a seafaring man to get his feet on a deck once more."

Listen World!

They Burn--Do We?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

They say the faces of the young Nazi parachutists are an amazing sight. Barely nineteen, many of them, but their faces are transfigured, as by fire. They know they may be coming down to death or life-long misery. They know they have left everything a man personally cherishes. Yet they drop like torches, aflame with the vision that has been lighted in them.

They are all wrong by our ratings. They are not only throwing their own lives away; they are worshipers of a mad man, they are killing all that is lovely and fair in civilization. Yet on they come, like martyrs, billowing out of the blue, their faces serious as young saints'. And up they go against the guns, wave upon wave of them, giving their lives eagerly, furiously for their blinding faith.

They may hate them because they are Germans—and I too hate the spirit that has poisoned the old Germany. But I cannot hate these boys, dying with the glory still on their young faces. I am wrung when I think of them. And I am bowed with shame.

I wonder if we could go so gloriously to death? I wonder if the fire that sustains the English and the German burns in us too?

We are seeing a miraculous thing in those dying days, both Allied and Axis. We are seeing the triumph of Faith, a Faith so great that it can blot out all personal desire and set men to thronging the heavens as once they thronged the roads during the Crusades.

It is easy to hate and despise our enemies because they are imperilling our security and threatening our destiny. But it takes a wise and steady man to see that our enemies have achieved something which we yet lack.

We Americans believe in what we have. Those dying boys believe in what they are, in what they love. So, dying, they smile.

Hideous as war is, awful as its wounds may be, I believe that America needed this lesson. We have come too far from our sturdy, self-respecting beginnings. We have sold ourselves too long to the alurement of things. We have banked too much on shrewdness and swank. We have forgotten that a man is only as strong and as formidable as the faith that burns within him. Things will not help when a man takes to the 'chute and braves a thousand miles of uncertainty. It is then that only that flame which burns within him will help.

In ten years time, Hitler put that flame into half-starved youngsters, malnourished weaklings. Today it holds them steady against the horrors of death, against every conceivable sacrifice. They give their broken bones, their spilled entrails, willingly, that Germany may have what they call a better deal.

Would we dare to do the same if the challenge were up to us? Do we care enough for anything, believe enough in anything, to die laughing?

I wonder! But I also believe. There isn't enough evidence to bet on yet. I'm thinking of dead man's face I once saw beside a wilderness trail, with the skeleton of his donkey. On that old man's mummified face, there still remained a smile. He had believed! and Faith had made his going glorious.

And German or English, Italian or Russian, I think that God will have a place ready for the boys who died for their faith, however mistaken . . . and comfort for the broken hearts of the mothers who bore them.

Let's Look Around

In Idaho Small Cities Are 'Big'

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho—This lively little city, which provides a convenient stopover after a late start from Salt Lake City, has come close to doubling its population in the past ten years and now gives the impression of being considerably larger than the 15,024, with which it is credited.

The claim of Idaho City, third largest in the state, is that it is "the fastest growing city in Idaho," Boise City being largest, with 26,030 population—which gives the idea that in Idaho a city of Mansfield's size would be a metropolis.

If you have wondered about the origin of "the Idaho russet potato" you need be in doubt no longer as we are now right in the midst of that particular commodity. This is the Snake River valley section and centers an area of more than a million acres of irrigated land.

Idaho's extensive agricultural production has been made possible by irrigation and in the state there are more than 3,000 irrigation projects and 10,000 miles of irrigating canals.

When it is considered that the population of the entire state of Idaho is little more than that of Cincinnati, its accomplishments might well be taken as an example by states in which opportunities are greater.

THE DRIVE from Salt Lake City here was through Ogden, a city of about Mansfield's size, and Brigham, a small place which sticks closely to the 5,000 size. Brigham, as you may guess, was founded by Brigham Young, soon after headquarters were established at Salt Lake City, and was designed as protection against the Indians. But the early Mormons had little trouble with the Ute Indians in this territory. Brigham Young sent food supplies to the Indians with the message, "We do not desire to fight—but if you want to fight us you must have food." The answer came back "We do not fight our friends." And that was that.

ACROSS the state line, into Idaho, the highway leads through Pocatello, which, with its 18,133 population, ranks second in the state and also proudly makes claim to being the center of the "finest fishing and hunting area in the state." It is seat of the southern branch of the University of Idaho, and headquarters for the vast Caribou national forest, an extensive game reserve. A 25-mile drive from Pocatello to Idaho Falls is mostly along rapidly-flowing Snake river, through richly productive farm lands—quite different from the arid stretches of barren waste through which we had been traveling earlier in the day.

DISCOVERY of gold in Idaho came considerably later than the California gold rush but it is the richness of its mineral deposits—gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc—that transformed this part of "the great American desert" from a liability into an asset. It is estimated that Idaho mines produce around $35,000,000 annually.

Here, as in Nevada and Utah, silver dollars are the common medium of exchange, and if you're not on the lookout you'll soon find your pockets overloaded with "hard money," as change is always handed out in silver dollars or half dollars.

THE MORMON influence extends very definitely into Idaho, especially in the southern part of the state, where agricultural settlements were made as extension of the work being done by Mormon colonizers in Utah, and there are many adherents to the faith in the cities, towns and rural sections of the state.

Idaho is by no means as "wide open" as Nevada, nor as restricted as Utah—more like Ohio, for instance, with a number of regulatory laws on the statute books but not enforced.

FLASH-BACK: Not previously mentioned is that churches of all denominations are represented in modern Salt Lake City—Catholic and Protestant —and each seems to prosper, although it is Mormon Temple Square; commemorative statuary; the Seagull monument; industrial and relief activities; Lion House, former home of Brigham Young but now a social and educational center, and Brigham Young's burial place, that dominate the city's religious thought and draw main attention of visitors.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Specter of AEF Still Throws Fright Into Leaders of Nazis

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Dr. Herbert Scholz, once Hitler's confidential representative in the German embassy, is now consul in Boston. Coming to Washington on the train the other day he bumped into an old friend—an American.

They had known each other for many years and fell to chatting quite frankly about the war.

"How soon are you going to use convoys?" asked the German consul.

"Soon, I hope," replied his friend.

"That means breaking diplomatic relations," replied Scholz. Then he added: "Of course we expect you to be in the war. We've counted on that. However, in this war, America will never send an expeditionary force. The American people won't stand for it; that's one thing we're sure of."

"I don't see that at all," replied the friend. "Our navy is stronger than ever before. We were able to convoy troop ships in the last war and I see no reason why we cannot do it in this war. After all, it was an expeditionary force which turned the tide in the last war, wasn't it?"

The German consul admitted this was true. He seemed upset and asked several times if his friend felt certain that the United States would send an expeditionary force. He kept saying that sentiment in the middle west wouldn't permit it, and came back to the subject frequently.

Note—In diplomatic circles one explanation for the sinking of the Robin Moor is that Germany now figures the United States will come into the war no matter what happens, but is confident that no expeditionary force will be sent until Hitler has administered the final stroke to England

On Again, Off Again Murray

Behind-the-scenes developments last week indicate that the anti-Red force inside the CIO will not get very much help from Phil Murray in their drive to purge the organization of key-placed Kommie leaders.

No leftist himself, Murray seems afraid of a showdown with the left-wingers and bent on appeasement.

The anti-Reds say they are determined to clean house even if it splits the CIO wide open. The leftists, fearful of being isolated, will play every trump card to hold Murray in line to protect them. This strategy is very apparent.

When Murray finally blasted O. M. Orton, leftist head of the Woodworkers union and then condemned the outlaw plane strike at Inglewood, Calif., the antis were jubilant.

But two days after the army took over the North American plant, Murray suddenly reversed himself and sharply criticized the seizure.

Behind that statement was maneuvering by Harry Bridges, leftist Pacific Coast leader. Sensing the wave of public ire at the Kommies, Bridges cannily decided it was time for them to duck for cover.

He had endorsed the strike, but hurriedly he switched and recommended that work be resumed. Also, he sent word to leftist leaders of the outlaw strike of Cleveland die-casters to pull in their horns—an order they obeyed promptly.

Bridges and Curran.

Bridges followed this up by a message to his east coast pal, Joe Curran, head of the CIO Maritime Workers, to arrange a get-together between Orton and Murray. Only a few insiders know that it was Bridges, working through Curran, who arranged this peace meeting. Orton gave the impression that he was making the trip from Seattle to Washington at the request of Murray. But Curran sat in on their meeting.

Bridges knows that the leftists, while in control of key places in a number of CIO unions, numerically are weak and would be easy to oust in a determined fight. He seeks to forestall such a purge by playing on Murray's fears of a split of the CIO.

So the leftists are plying him with assurances that henceforth they will be "good boys" and lay off the rough stuff. Murray apparently has accepted these promises and is now seeking to restore "peace" between the warring factions.

Note—It was significant that Murray conferred with Orton and Curran in his office in the United Mine Workers building, one floor above the vast, ornate office of John L. Lewis. Also significant: Lee Pressman, leftist general counsel of the CIO and a close Lewis lieutenant, participated in the talks.

Allies Will Continue.

There was an interesting inside story behind the declaration by fourteen Allied governments in London that they would fight Hitler to the end.

The idea was first conceived in the United States by one of the president's friends, who put it up to Vice President Wallace. The plan was for each of the exiled governments—Norway, Greece, Yugoslavia, Holland, Poland, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, etc.—to join in sending a letter to President Roosevelt setting forth their determination to continue fighting for freedom and independence in Europe.

Vice President Wallace thought the plan was excellent and took it to the president, who then sent it to the secretary of state.

After that nothing happened. Finally, the vice president called upon the president to see what had become of the idea. He found that Cordell Hull had sent Roosevelt a memo disapproving it. Mr. Hull's chief objection, in effect, was this: "It would bring discord among our people."

After that the idea was put up to the British. Churchill snapped it up immediately, altering it to have the declaration jointly made in London instead of addressed to Roosevelt.

Hard to Remember.

A "mental wizard" at the first anniversary dinner of the Washington Radio Correspondents association went among the guests and asked them to name "something hard to remember" for him to identify. One of those he asked was New Jersey's massive GOP Senator W. Warren Barbour.

"Republican," Barbour shot back.

Note—A perambulating accordionist, stopping by Larry Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, brought down the house by playing "St. Louis Blues." It was at the St. Louis convention last month that Fly tangled with the National Broadcasters Association.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—The wreaths that were hung on Max Schmeling's name by some sports writers when the erroneous report of his demise in Crete came in were not in key with the things that were said about him when he was fighting in the United States. I can recall more than one essay summing up the German as a miser and a penny-grabber. Max never cared about blowing his money on blonds in Broadway nightclubs.

It is natural, I suppose, to say nice things about the dead. Yet somehow posthumous tributes have a phoney ring when written by men who never hesitated to be blunt and uncomplimentary when the "deceased" was alive.

Most of these eulogies called Schmeling a great guy and a game if not a great fighter. They dwelt on his good points his abiding faith in himself when all others doubted. Yet these voices were not lifted in his defense when he was given a crude run-around after he knocked out Joe Louis in their first fight—a deal that saw the beaten Louis, not the victorious Schmeling, given the chance at the heavyweight title, then held by the amiable James J. Braddock, the Jersey pier walloper.

Maybe I'm wrong. Maybe I'm naive. But it seems to me that inside politics shouldn't be the only factor in determining a challenger for the heavyweight title in New York. But that's the way it is in our town. No matter how good you are, you don't get the shot unless you agree to play ball. You don't get the champ unless you sign your future ring activities away.

Whether Max Schmeling was a good fighter or a bad fighter had no bearing on the issue. He whipped Louis, and the only reason he fought Louis was for the right to meet Braddock for the title. He must have been dazed, to say the least, when Louis, after recovering from his beating, was given preference and an open shot at Braddock's title, which he lifted without too much trouble.

But, things like that happen in New York. They happen every day. You've got to play ball if you want to get ahead in the big-time fight racket. You've got to agree to fight for just one man—and nobody else. You've got to take orders. Joe Louis is a better fighter than Schmeling ever was or ever could be. He is truly a great champion. But that doesn't alter the case that Schmeling earned the right to, meet Braddock for the title—and never got it. He was shoved around. He was finnessed as neatly as Culbertson can relieve you of an undefended queen.

The word now is that Schmeling, a parachute trooper in the German army, is convalescing from a fever on a hospital cot somewhere in Greece. I don't know whether he'll see the New York papers or not, but if he does the flowery eulogies spun around his "demise" should hand him a good laugh.

A Farmer's Diary

Little Pigs Arrive

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

LAST winter, when the snow was deep, we swapped our dry and barren milk goats for a gilt, bred to farrow in June. When he brought the pig, her former owner humorously announced, "Her name is Bertha., I christened her on the way over. She's got the disposition of an angel. She's been so sweet all along that I didn't even put a ring in her nose when I rung the others."

Well, I made a solid pen in a stall at the rear of the bank barn where we could throw a forkful of clean straw every day. I bought a balanced ration containing sunshine vitamins and everything, and except for the daily chores of feeding and bedding nobody would have known that a black sow was around.

She was young when she came—not quite full grown. How she did lengthen out! She grew so tall that when she reared to meet me with her front feet on the top board of the pen, she often knocked my hat off. She had a curl in her tail and for exercise she tossed her trough around mischievously with her unrung nose, so that in the darkened barn I frequently had hunt to find it. Then perhaps it would be upside down beneath a pile of straw. Finally I staked it fast, in a corner by the door.

The pig disposed of potato parings, vegetable tops and other kitchen wastes with gusto. Frequently, as a reward of merit, I gave her a basket of grass from the lawn or a wheelbarrow load of weeds pulled from the garden.

The other morning my wife called excitedly from the barn, "Come and see! Bertha has seven pigs!" We all went running. There they were in the strawy nest at the end of the stall—three red ones, three black and white, and one black and red. Although Bertha is of Poland China stock, somewhere there must be a Duroc in the family connections. Such things are bound to show!

"Oh," squealed the children in unison, "aren't they cute?"

"I wonder," said my wife, "if they've had anything to eat yet?"

* * *

The sow settled down in the straw with her back to us and seven little pink noses and seven pairs of turned back ears made a row along her off side. They whimpered and nudged and scrambled and mouthed their mother. Then one funny little fellow with a round spot of black above one eye got his pink toothless mouth over something that shut him up. Soon they all were feeding. The mother pig grunted contentedly and relaxed in the straw.

I must have had a peculiar gleam in my eye, for one of the boys asked me, "What are you thinking about?"

I was honest.

"Hams," I said. "Smoked hams and spareribs and bacon and sausage and lard—and even roast tenderloin!"

The Secret of the Marshbanks + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER VIII

Cherry leaned against the rough homespun shoulder of Kelly's coat and listened dreamily although this talk was mostly about Fran. She was deliciously tired after the long day in the open air. She thought how she loved him, and how proud she would be to belong here, in the front seat of his car, resting against him.

They reached the Marshbanks house only too soon for her, and she said good night and ran up the steps glad that the extra thirty miles to Palo Alto had not been asked of her. Martin the butler admitted her with the message that Miss Amy had gone for a ride but would shortly be there, and her friend May told her that she was to have the room next to Amy's as usual.

Cherry found a comfortable robe, slippers and a nightgowii laid out for her. She was anticipating the comfort of an hour's rest and reading before Amy arrived when there was a knock at her door.

A little puzzled, she said "Come in," her heart leaping with irritational terror when the invitation was accepted by old Mrs. Marshbanks, the formidable woman who was her grandmother and Amy's.

"I hoped I'd find you alone, Miss Rawlings. I wanted to speak to you," Dora Marshbanks said. She advanced to a deep chair, seated herself and by a slight inclination of her head indicated that Cherry was also to be seated.

"I don't know whether you know," the older woman began, with a steady look, "how definitely I object to your presence in this house. You should know for I've asked my son to speak to you of it but I have no idea that he has done so."

For a few seconds the words did not seem to make sense to Cherry; their shocking import reached her, in all its deadly simplicity and she felt her throat thicken and her hands grow cold.

"Or has he done so?" demanded Mrs. Marshbanks.

"He—he—No," was all Cherry could feebly stammer.

"I thought he hadn't. I thought even the least sensitive person would hardly come here after any suggestion from him. I am no longer the mistress of this house," said the old lady, in a sort of cold passion, "but I am not a cipher yet! I am asking you civilly not to make it a habit to come here."

Cherry sat staring at her in a fascinated horror of silence.

"You know your own history," said the inflexible voice. "You know why your presence here is an—an insult to decency and to me. I bitterly regret the—circumstances that have given you what you seem to consider a right to regard yourself as a daughter of the house!"

"I am a daughter of the house!" Cherry answered, her own words surprising her as much as they could possibly have surprised her companion.

"How dare you say that!" Mrs. Marshbanks said sharply. "You have absolutely no claim. You have been well established in life; you are being cared for now. Be careful that you don't lose even what you have!"

"I am not afraid of losing it, and I am not afraid of you!" said Cherry, at white heat. "I will come to this house as long as Amy and Fran and the judge want me! I wish you would go out of my room! I am sorry that any blood of yours runs in my veins!"

"And you think you can go on with your college work, be asked about in good society, once your history is known?" the older woman demanded, rising. "You think that Amy will continue to think you the most charming friend in the world once she knows that you are her half sister, that you are the living reminder of her father's weakness and immorality. I think you won't risk that. I think you'll realize that only you can keep your own people from being disgraced in the eyes of the world. Your own father and your mother too, you know."

"Your own son!" cried Cherry.

"What about Gran's own son?" Amy asked, coming in from her room, tired and cold and blown after her long ride. "What's Uncle Jud done? Why, what's . . ." She looked in amazement and concern from one face to the other. "What is it?" she asked. "What were you saying about Uncle Jud?"

There was a silence while the three looked at one another. It seemed to Cherry to last for a long, long time.

"There we stood like statues," Cherry said, telling Kelly about it a few weeks later, "until I thought we must all be frozen! Amy knew something was horribly wrong, and she kept asking 'What is it? What is it?' and old Mrs. Marshbanks was sort of panting, and she wouldn't say anything, and I couldn't. And finally Amy said: 'I know it's about uncle, because I heard Cherry say so!'"

"You hadn't said so?" Kelly was lying face down in the fresh, deep grass now, biting a blade thoughtfully; he looked up at her. The sun was sinking. Below the hill where Cherry and Kelly were sitting were the lake and the college buildings and beyond them the roofs of Palo Alto.

"No, I hadn't said a word about the judge, but I had said 'your son' and Amy heard that!" Cherry answered. "That's the whole trouble. That old fiend—that old inquisitioner—had told me that if I didn't break off my friendship with Amy, she'd tell everyone who I was—who I am, and I said that would mean her son was in it it too!"

"You meant that wouldn't help her family reputation much?"

"Yes, but she was too wild to mind that . . . Well, after we'd all stood petrified for what seemed about an hour, old Mrs. Marshbanks said to Amy, "it is extremely dishonorable to listen to the conversation of others!" and walked out of the room. Of course Amy was mad with curiosity and so I pretended that her grandmother didn't like me because Emma was once their nurse, and she didn't think it was a very suitable friendship for her granddaughter."

"Good girl, Cherry!"

"Yes, but Amy's heard something, too, you know. She said right away that she'd always suspected that her Uncle Jud was my father. I denied it, but she thought it all the more. And, Kelly," Cherry finished, in a voice of infinite distress, "I can't have her go on thinking that! I simply can't. It isn't fair to him."

"That was how long ago?"

"The Sunday night we came back from your house."

"Three weeks today. D'you suppose the old ghoul told Amy anything more?"

"I don't think she did. I don't imagine she'd ever mention it. Amy went with the Monroes to Hawaii right afterward, and I believe that old Mrs. Marshbanks will just let the whole matter drop."

"She very probably doesn't know that Amy suspects anything at all if she walked out of the room."

"That's the way I think it is. I was so upset," Cherry went on, "that I wrote it all to Aunt Emma. I had her answer yesterday. She said that the best thing to do was to keep mum about it. But, Kelly, you know how girls are. They get gossiping, and Amy's bound to tell someone, and it'll gradually get around."

"What does the judge think? He's the one to speak to."

"But how could he—how utterly flat it would be for him to send for Amy and tell her that he isn't my father! It would be so—so humiliating for him, and so flat! And besides that, I don't think she'd believe him."

"She'd have to know the truth about your real father. Why not? You've taken it on the chin long enough. Ask his advice, and you'll see he thinks Amy ought to know."

"You always help me so, Kelly! You always make things seem so simple."

"I wish I could work out my own problems," he said, looking away with darkened eyes.

There was a long silence. Kelly raised himself on his elbows and stared at her.

"What are you thinking?" Cherry said.

"That you look very nice, today. That—well, I was wondering if you'd like to come and live at Topcote, Cherry."

She looked at him, flushing and paling.

"How do you mean?"

"I mean marry me, of course; I mean as Mrs. Coates."

"I see," Cherry said, she looked away.

"I've been thinking about it. Ever since that night when you made the toast and it was so cold and the Wilcoxes were there, I've been wondering why it was all so cozy that night. It came to me that it was you. So I telephoned you and asked you if you were free last Sunday, and you were going on a picnic to Point Lobos."

"George arranged that."

"Is George Pringle in love with you?"

"He has a case," Cherry answered indifferently.

"But you don't like him."

"Not that way. No. He's nice, but not that way. No."

"You know how I feel about Fran," Kelly said presently. "She'll always be the unattainable—the dream woman. I can't help that. But you and I could have a lot of fun, Cherry, roaming about, painting things and clearing the creek."

He looked at her expectantly, and met a strange, thoughtful look in her eyes, fixed upon his.

"You once told me, months ago, before you'd seen other men," he went on, "that you liked me. I've not forgotten it. It made me feel different toward you ever since. I like you better than any woman I've ever known. I'm eleven years older than you are, and that's a long time, but if you wanted to go to dances or movies or anything . . ."

"Dances," Cherry echoed in quiet scorn as he hesitated. She left the word to linger in the air.

"The idea is that I need you, and it'd be a home for you, and perhaps kids . . . The more the merrier!" Kelly urged, growing increasingly uneasy under her quiet, almost absent manner. "You'd have my name, once and for all, and you could snap your fingers at the whole gang!"

Cherry jumped to her feet, and started to walk to the car that was parked a hundred yards away.

"Why, thank you, Kelly!" she said politely. "You're tremendously kind to think that way about me. I appreciate it just as much, and I'm eternally grateful to you," she went on briskly, no emotion whatsoever discernible in manner or voice, "but—well, you see, I've missed a good deal in my life. I've never had a father; I barely remember my mother; I had no home as a child, no birthday parties and bedtime stories—all that.

Howard Hodge, the designer, who believes a woman should always wear hats men admire. Trimmed with a self rosette of sea green taffeta and black organza, which means it would blend nicely with a black dress, a green dress, a white dress, a pink dress, or what have you.

Small Budget No Handicap For Newlyweds

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Is it possible for two people to live on $80 a month? I am 19 years old and my boy friend is 29. We've been going together for two years and have been in love for almost all that time.

"He is now making $100 a month, but twenty dollars of this goes to his mother. I feel certain we could get along on his income, but we wouldn't be able to have luxuries. I'd be contented, I know, with a small apartment.

"I'm a very good cook and can fix the plainest things in the market so they are good and look appetizing. I know it wouldn't be all honey and cream, but I'm willing to take the hard knocks as they come. I love him, and if there's any possible chance of living on $80 a month I can do it? Do you have a budget we can follow?

"GINGER."

I could give you the names of two of this country's richest men who began their married lives on less than $80 a month, and who are now internationally famous for their philanthropies.

Their families, however, might object to such recent history. On the other hand, I understand that the Vanderbilts are tremendously proud of that Dutch ancestor who helped her husband plant and tend his vegetable garden, then piled the products on the boat in which he rowed from Staten Island to New York. She helped by her thrift to accumulate the first dollars of that spectacular fortune, which in the third generation had increased to untold proportions.

So, when you tell me, my dear Ginger, that you know how to cook and make the simplest dishes attractive, please let me say that this is more than half the battle. Cheap cuts of meat, if properly cooked, are as appetizing and nutritious as the more expensive cuts.

The Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Economics, has gotten together dozens of leaflets, to which I am constantly calling the attention of housewives. "Meat Dishes at Low Cost" and "Diets to fit the Family Income." There are dozens of similar suggestions which I have listed in my budget, compiled for a family of four living on $25 a week. A family of two may cut this budget to even less. I shall be very glad to send you a copy of this on receipt of a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope.

Now that spring is here and we have plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables on which to draw, we can get by on a slimmer budget than in winter time. Nothing is more appetizing than a good salad, and by a good salad I do not mean one of those strange conglomerations so often served at women's luncheons, which are neither a dessert nor a salad.

A perfect salad for this time of the year is dandelion, a prime favorite with the French. The salad must be cut when the leaves are young and tender, as it would take the chewing gifts of a cow to eat the tough ouside leaves. Served with the usual French dressing of three parts oil and one of vinegar, combined with the mashed yolks of a couple of hard-boiled eggs, and with a substantial bread and plenty of butter, and a dish of stewed fruit, you have a good and economical luncheon.

Today's brides are in great luck in regard to their house-furnishings. Nearly all big department stores have sample rooms, full of charming suggestions,and if you can't afford the maple or cherry reproductions of Early American furniture almost as good models in pine are procurable. And young people can have lots of fun staining or painting these.

Attractive chintz may be bought as reasonably as twenty cents a yard. So with thrift and common-sense, my dear Ginger, why not marry your fiance?

APRICOT NECTAR

2 12-ounce cans apricot nectar
¼ cup lemon juice
1 cup orange juice
1 quart lime carbonated beverage or ginger ale

Add the apricot nectar to the orange and lemon juices. When ready to serve pour over ice and add the carbonated beverage. Garnish each glass with mint leaves and a Maraschino cherry. Makes three quarts.

If you don't happen to have such a drink already made up, you can concoct any number of appetizing drink combinations at a moment's notice with one of the many different flavored bottle carbonated beverages as a base. "Cream Float," for instance, is easily made by filling tall glasses two-thirds full of ginger ale and topping with generous scoops of pineapple ice.

There are more than 56 waterfalls higher than Niagara Falls.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Olga looked inquiringly at me as her husband put his question about our going back to the party, and I knew she was waiting for me to give her a cue to her response.

My answer was ready. Purposely, I knew, Philip Veritzen had given me the opportunity to convey to the man on the balcony the false information I wished him to receive and digest before he made any further move.

"I'll come over just as soon as I can manage it," I said, pitching my voice high enough to be heard on the balcony outside. "But, honestly, I should fall asleep standing up and while people were talking to me, if I went over now.

"But you know how just a short nap refreshes me. If I slip into a negligee and lie down for a few minutes I shall be asleep in a jiffy, and 20 minutes will make me perfectly fit again. Will you ring me not later than half an hour from now."

"Are you sure that will be long enough?" Olga asked doubtfully.

"Absolutely," I returned, "I could do with less than that."

Veritzen Is Considerate.

"But you will not," Philip said with decision. "They will wait any time over there for you to appear, and if they don't—that is their loss. Your comfort is paramount to anything else."

"Thank you," I told him moving quietly toward my bedroom door as I spoke, and he put another question.

"Is there anything Olga or I can do for you before we go back to the party?"

"Yes, there is," I said promptly, glad of the cue, for I wished no cessation of the conversation. "I want you to take back to Mary a little bottle of her favorite perfume which I tucked into my bag for her. She was lamenting just now that she had exhausted hers, and I tried to find it for her, but couldn't lay my hands on it. However, it's in my bag somewhere I'm sure it won't take me long to find it, if you don't mind waiting."

I was at my bedroom door as I finished, and I knew they would keep up the play of talk while I was gone. As I hurried through my bedroom to the ridden door masquerading as a panel, I heard Olga's voice saying, "You know we don't mind in the least," and then Philip's putting a casual question to her concerning her opinion of my balcony suite.

Meets Her Father's Men.

And then, noiselessly, stealthily, I opened the hidden door, went through it, closing it behind me, and confronted five of my father's men, instead of the four for whom I had asked. The fifth was Gus, the man in charge of my father's hideaway. The others were strange to me, and as I saw his familiar face shining with friendly cheer, and with the loyalty which he bears to my father and everybody connected with him, warmth succeeded the chill around the "cockles of my heart." It was with sudden confident courage that I greeted him.

"I am so glad you are here, Gus," I said, stressing the pronoun, "although I didn't expect you."

"I don't usually go out, you know," he said, telling me something which I already knew. "I most always stay with the place. But there's nothing on hand just now, and it's safe to leave for an hour or two. I don't suppose this business, whatever it is, will take longer than that."

"If things go well, everything will be finished in less than that time," I told him. "And now I will tell you what is on hand."

I wasted no time in detailed explanations—it was not necessary for any of them to know anything of my problem beyond the capture of the gangster.

"There is a man on the balcony of the suite connecting with this, the one he thinks I am occupying," I began, "who must be captured as silently as possible. There are hiding places which I will show you from which you can leap at him when he tries to get a certain paper from me—something which he will do as soon as he thinks I am asleep. When you are safely in your hiding place, I shall telephone the hotel operator to waken me in half an hour, saying that I must have a nap before going on to a party, as I am so fatigued from my journey."

"But—" Gus started to protest, but I looked at him with decision in my eyes and he stopped short.

"Will you please come here and look at the plan of the room?" I said.

They gathered round me, and I showed them the location of the closets where I wished them to hide. Gus nodded his approval, but another man, evidently the leader of the four with Gus, qualified it.

"There's no need of a man in the front room closet," he said, adding grimly: "He'll never get that far. But, if the room's going to be dark—and of course he won't show any light except perhaps a small flash—there must be a man under the bed where you're going to pretend you're asleep. It's too much of a risk any other way."

Cinnamon Jam Bars.

1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup sugar
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup lard or similar fat
½ teaspoon almond flavoring
1 egg
Jam

Grease shallow pan. Sift flour, measure and sift again with baking powder, sugar, salt and spices. Cream shortening with flavoring and blend into flour mixture, using pastry blender or the fingertips. Add beaten egg and mix until well blended. Spread ½ mixture in prepared pan, cover evenly with jam, spread with remaining mixture and bake in hot oven for 25 to 30 minutes. When cool cut in bars.

Like the Englishman's five o'clock tea, a stop in the afternoon for a refreshing carbonated beverage is becoming a national habit with Americans. The prevailing nickel price brings this healthful custom within the reach of all.

Better to Rule Child Late Than Never

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Perhaps you have been led astray by the doctrine that the little child never should be restrained—never spanked—but always should be reasoned with and diverted from wrong-doing by distraction and persuasion. Suppose in consequence you have a child six, eight or ten who rarely recognizes your authority. What are you going to do about it?

The chances are that emergencies have arisen when you were so distraught that your feelings got the better of you, in a fit of anger you spanked the child. Almost surely you have scolded him or spoken shrilly to him. But you probably have discovered that he has grown more unmanageable all the while.

What remorse you suffer from your loss of self-control! For two very good reasons, your final attempt at physical punishment was ineffectual. It was not chosen nor administered at moments when you were wholly reasonable and self-controlled. It was begun and has been practiced very late.

A Definite Plan.

The problem can be corrected, however, even though the child is ten years old. Make a definite plan and stick to it. Needless to say the task grows increasingly difficult to you and the child, the longer effectual training in the meaning of NO had been delayed.

In order to succeed, both parents should sit down together when the child concerned is not around and decide on a definite program that they are sure will work. They will center their attention on one or two important misdemeanors, agreeing to ignore all others less important for the time.

Provided they agree that some physical force will be necessary, they also must agree to limit it solely on inhibitions, and not to making the child do things. They will aim first to establish NO as final, without doubt or argument. Their success will depend chiefly on how rarely they use this monosyllable.

Forbidden Conduct.

The specific term of forbidden conduct will calmly be announced to the child and the parents will name the penalty if the act is repeated. Suppose the penalty should be to sit doing nothing for exactly half an hour as measured by the clock, or denial of some cherished privilege. If the child deliberately leaves before the allotted time is ended, a spanking is sometimes justified, provided all the while the parents had acted wholly unemotionally.

Once the child knows, without doubt, that back of every form of milder punishment there is in reserve a physical finality, he won't face the risk. The child who before he was three or four has had a few effecutal spankings to make NO final will never need a spanking.

If we want to abolish this punishment and wish to train children for good citizenship, we will teach them basic inhibitions about as soon as they can toddle. Then when they are six, eight or ten, they will seldom need punishment of any sort; perhaps none. And when they are in their teens they may rarely have to hear a rebuke.

I still have on hand some reprints of a magazine article of mine entitled, "Do you spank your child?" to be had by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp.

DUCK ON THE DEFENSE

Ducking a trick, so that your partner will still have a card of the suit left for a later lead to you, is just as important to play for the defense as it is for the declarer while trying to establish the dummy's suit. Many a time there is no other way to foresee enough tricks to have a chance to defeat the contract.

	♠ 10 9 6 ♥ A K 8 5 2 ♦ K 8 6 ♣ 10 7
♠ Q 8 2 ♥ J 7 6 4 ♦ J 9 3 2 ♣ 5 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ J 7 5 4 3 ♥ Q 10 ♦ 5 ♣ A K Q 8 4
	♠ A K ♥ 9 3 ♦ A Q 10 7 4 ♣ J 9 6 3

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♥
1 ♠	1 NT	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT

Approximately this same bidding occurred at two tables of a tournament for the Eastern mixed team of four championship and the benefit of the British-American Ambulance corps. In each case the opening lead was West's club 5. One East player won that trick with the Q, took two other clubs and then led the spade 4. South won this, cashed three diamonds and let West win a fourth one. Now declarer had nine tricks safely, as West had no more clubs to lead.

At the other table, Theodore A. Lightner, in the East, played his 8 on the first trick. He reckoned West would not lead the suit with a singleton, hence had two, and South consequently exactly four to the J. South was able to run only eight tricks before putting West in the lead, and the latter's club return gave East four club tricks, beating the contract by one.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ 8 6 4 ♥ A 8 4 ♦ K 10 8 4 ♣ K 6 3
♠ K J 9 ♥ J 6 ♦ Q 9 7 2 ♣ J 9 4 2	W. N. E. S.	♠ A Q 10 2 ♥ 9 3 2 ♦ J 6 3 ♣ Q 10 8
	♠ 7 5 3 ♥ K Q 10 7 5 ♦ A 5 ♣ A 7 5

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable).

If West leads the diamond 2 against South's 4-Hearts on this deal, how should the declarer play for his contract?

SPRING SALAD

One of the surest ways to arouse enthusiasm for food these spring days is to serve dishes that look as fresh and new as the season itself.

It's particularly easy to increase the appetite appeal of salads in this way. Here is an interesting salad that is spring incarnate with its attractive green coloring and "zippy" flavor.

Pears-in-Lime.

1 tablespoon gelatin
1 cup lime flavored carbonated beverage
1 small can Bartlett pears
½ cake cream cheese
½ cup cream, whipped (evaporated milk may be used)

Soak gelatin in ¼ cup cold water and dissolve over boiling water. Cool. Add the lime carbonated beverage gradually and pour into individual molds. Add pears, about two halves to each mold. When set, unmold on lettuce and serve with cheese which has been creamed with the whipped cream. Put a large spoonful of the cheese mixture on top of each mold and mayonnaise at the side on the lettuce.

Here is a new celery stick idea that will make a hit served with hot soups or salads. Slightly moisten soft yellow cream cheese with chili sauce, add a few chopped nuts (peanuts are fine), and carefully stuff three-inch celery sticks.

This is the way to make cornbread stuffing: Bake cornbread the usual way, but omit any sweetening. Cool and crumble with the fingers and substitute the cornbread crumbs for half the amount of white bread called for in the dressing recipe.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, June 19.

The astral influences bearing rule on this day may indicate some rather unusual or strange phases, in which the greatest success may come through sudden or quite unforeseen intervention. This may be the endorsement or substantial encouragement of superiors, employers or those in high places in moments when things seem most baffling or critical. There may be angles in which the public welfare or public activities seem jeapordized.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year in which the unexpected, surprising and unpredictable may take shape in moments when some peculiar or strange adventure is under consideration, with doubts as to happy outcomes. Elders, or superiors, even strangers may step in at the crisis, which must be engineered with conventional and practical maneuvers and not sensational gestures. Public factors are important, with probable public recognition.

A child born on this day may have much versatility and ingenuity, daring to venture into unknown and untried fields.

LIGHT DRINKER RATED WORST ROAD MENACE

Heavy Intoxication Found to Imperil Fewer on Highways.

HARRISBURG — (U.P.) — The "drinking driver," the one who is "as good as new after one or two drinks," is the major factor to be eliminated on motor highways if a large number of accidents, injuries, and deaths are to be prevented, believes Lynn G. Adams, Pennsylvania motor police commissioner.

Adams says "false confidence" instilled in most persons by alcoholic brews or a sense of increased ability makes the "drinking driver" more dangerous than the "staggering drunk driver," who is more easily apprehended and convicted. Actually, Adams points out that "liquor tears down the ability to think quickly, act quickly, and react quickly."

In Pennsylvania motor police arrests in 1940 for drunken driving totalled 1,079 and 86 per cent of that number were convicted Adams attributes the high percentage of convictions to motor police practice of obtaining an almost air-tight case before taking the offender into court.

However, Adams scores the difficulty in getting an air-tight case. He lists five obstacles to sweeping the "drinking driver" off the highway in order of their importance as follows:

1—Lack of differentiation between "drunken drivers" and "drinking drivers."

2—A misconception by jurors of the laws on drunken driving

3—The power of liquor to instill in drivers a false confidence in themselves regarding ability to handle an automobile.

4—Lack og definite knowledge by police of what is necessary to prove a drunken driving charge. No definite formula has ever been established.

5—Lack of uniformity in penalties and in court handling of drunken driving charges.

In explaining additional dangers of the "drinking driver," Capt. T. N. Boate, of the motor police, said: "The drunken driver generally is in too bad condition to travel far, almost always coming to grief before he has a chance to imperil other persons He drives his car into a post or a tree, or off the road, and soon we come along and pick him up."

"But the drinking driver, who is not in such bad shape, drives off down the road for an indeterminate distance, imperiling everyone who chances to be on the road with him."

Urbanoff was charged with drawing a knife in a bar brawl. The little girls are shown as they pleaded with Judge Liebowitz, who reduced the charge and gave Urbanoff a suspended sentence. Left to right, the girls are Florence, 14; Lilly, 8, and Sonia, 10.

FAMED AUTHOR WILL RETIRE FROM DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—(INS)—After nearly eight years in the U. S. diplomatic service, Meredith Nicholson plans to resume his writing career, perhaps with essays on political and social matters

Just returned from Nicaragua, where he was U. S. minister until his resignation, the famed Indiana author discussed his plans for the future after revealing that it is a "bewildering experience to be home again."

"I've written all kinds of things," he said, "but I'm proudest of my essays. I hold that anyone can write a novel.

"But first, I'm going to rest and get the weariness out of my bones. After that, I may get some ideas."

Nicholson first entered the diplomatic service in Paraguay, then served at Venezuela and finally at Nicaragua.

The author regards Nicaragua as the most friendly of all Central American countries toward the United States and suggested establishment of elementary schools there and in other Central and South American countries where English could be taught.

Nicholson expressed belief that such practice would do more good than exchange of college scholarships. Any city of any size at all in Central America has German elementary schools, he said.

Nicholson disclosed that President Anastasia Somosa of Nicaragua had anticipated the re-election of President Roosevelt.

"On the night of our elections," he said, "President Somosa had a dinner for all the Americans in the capital and we listened to the election returns. Finally, he drew me aside and showed me a telegram he had prepared to send to President Roosevelt, congratulating him.

"And he told me he had written it two days before, he was so sure of the outcome. He declared a two-day holiday after the election."

President Somosa visited Indianapolis last year and rode around the famed 500-mile race speedway in a race car. In recalling the incident, Nicholson remarked:

"I was scared to death when I learned of it. But Somosa told me just before I left that he'd like to do it again."

HOLLYWOOD—Nice contradiction department: On the Fred Astaire-Rita Hayworth movie, entitled "You'll Never Get Rich," the camera crane is equipped with white sidewall tires.

This is another training camp picture, following "Buck Privates," "Rookies on Parade," "Caught In the Draft" et al. But it has a new angle: Astaire plays a Broadway dance maestro who is called to Uncle Sam. His theater companions can't whip up a show without his guidance, so they take it to camp.

Watching Astaire and Hayworth rehearse, with a troupe of comedy chorines prompted this bright thought, offered gratis to the national defense authorities—get a Rita to sponsor every camp, and they can forget the draft. The girl has more of the old glam in a rehearsal outfit than most of the stars when they face the cameras.

The run on the south as a movie locale continues, with "The Yearling" just back from location in Florida, and Irving Pichel going down to Georgia to investigate settings for Vereen Bell's story, "Swamp Water."

It's been a long run, from "The Birth of a Nation" to "Gone With the Wind," both top money-makers. "Reap the Wild Wind" is a Florida piece. Other recent Dixie tales: "Virginia," "Flame of New Orleans," "Texas," "Kentucky," "Maryland," "The Lady From Louisiana," "Shepherd of the Hills," "Flight Command" and "I Wanted Wings" (Pensacola, Randolph and Kelly Fields), "Birth of the Blues," "Tobacco Road," "Kiss the Boys Goodbye." Only the pioneer West competes in steady lure to screen writers—and even some of the westerns ("Virginia City," "Santa Fe Trail," "Arizona," etc.) have dwelt lengthily on the War Between the States.

Story of Lease-Lend Aid's Kept In 2 Big Black Books

WASHINGTON—The story of United States' lend-lease aid to Great Britain is in a big black book.

You can't look in the book, because it has a very exclusive circulation. There are only two copies. President Roosevelt has one and Harry L. Hopkins, his assistant in charge of lend-lease, has the other.

You might find it dull reading, anyway. It is packed so full of figures that microfilm pictures of the huge statistical tables were inserted in the books to keep them down to reasonable size.

But, after the war, the book will have a thorough airing because it is the record of what presumably must be paid back. Britain is expected to pay back plane for plane and tank for tank, under the theory of the lend-lease act, although payment in some other kind of usable merchandise might also be considered.

ministration are so secret, that officials will say nothing about their work. It took permission from the White House to obtain these few facts.

The "big, black book" was described by Major General James H. Burns, executive officer of the "office of defense aid reports" (legal name of the lend-lease administration) and Philip Young, his chief assistant. Even Burns doesn't have a copy, and all Young has are the rough worksteets and the microfilm negatives—all locked up in a vault.

As Young explained it, "what we have is really a $7,000,000,000 general store dealing in everything from eggs to tanks."

Suppose the British want one airplane and one carload of telephone wire. Here is what would happen:

1. First the British experts on airplanes and telephone wire would meet informally with corresponding American experts to sound them out on the availability of the items, the recommended specification for them, and possible substitutes.

2. Then the British would draw up requisitions on a standard form and send them to Burns.

3. Burns and young would note the requisitions and refer them to one of five agencies — the war, navy, agriculture or treasury departments, or the maritime commission. In the case of telephone wire, it would go to the treasury. In the case of the airplane—a special case—it would go to a joint army-navy aircraft board.

4. The department returns the requisition to Burns with written recommendations, which say whether the item is already in stock, or on order, or can be ordered.

5. If the department approves, and already has the item in stock, Burns prepares a letter for the president's signature authorizing the transfer. If the department approves but has to buy the item, the matter then goes to the budget bureau for aproval and for preparation of documents for the president's signature authorizing the outlay from lease-lend or other authorized funds.

SENT TO O. S. R.

Coshocton Youths, Accused In Murder, Sentenced.

Murder indictments against two Coshocton youths, suspected of several purse-snatchings in Mansfield in January, were expected to be dropped today after both pleaded guilty to assault and robbery charges at Youngstown and were sentenced to the Ohio State Reformatory.

Harold Cox, 19, and Owen Bickel, 21, who were captured after police trailed them by a series of purse-snatchings from southeastern Ohio to Michigan, suddenly entered pleas of guilty yesterday after their trial date had been postponed.

Judge David G. Jenkins sentenced the pair to indeterminate terms in the reformatory.

Prosecutor William A. Ambrose had also obtained indictments against the youths on first-degree murder charges in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Alphonsus Foley, mother of nine children, on March 10 in Youngstown. She was killed apparently while resisting a purse snatcher.

Belief that the murder indictments would be dropped were based on the "alibi" of the youths that they were snatching purses in a southern Pennsylvania town on that date.

At Coshocton, Cox's wife, Jane, 14, and Eileen Sullivan, 16, await trial on purse-snatching charges.

War Will Spur American Wines, Expert Declares

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia.—(INS)—There's a fellow out in Council Bluffs, Ia., who thinks American wine is second to none and the European war is going to prove it.

He is Harry E. Martin, manager of the Council Bluffs Grape Growers' association, and he says the war-created shortage of imported wines is the golden opportunity American wine makers have long awaited.

Domestic wines are handicapped, especially in the east, because they fail to come in a bottle bearing a French, German or Italian label, Martin contends.

The extra price of European wine, he says, is caused by import duties and transportation costs, not superiority of the product.

U. S. TO CLAMP CONTROL ON IMMIGRATION

Bars Departure of 330,000 German Nationals From Nation.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Sharper control over immigration into the United States is to be instituted before July 1, authoritative sources declared today, a few hours after the government had barred the departure "pending further investigation" of any of the 330,000 German nationals now living in this country.

Boards of review will be established to pass on all applications for immigrant visas, after each application has been thoroughly investigated.

Applications for the annual quota of 153,774 immigrant visas at present are passed on by field offices of the immigration bureau after—so Attorney-General Jackson told congress—"a rather haphazard" investigation of the prospective citizens' qualifications and history.

The state, justice, war and navy departments will have one representative on each of the five boards of review to be set up, it was learned, with the possibility that the federal bureau of investigation or a special immigration investigation agency will also be represented.

The army and navy representation is particularly designed to prevent fifth columnists or subversive agents of other governments from entering the United States in the guise of immigrants.

The order issued yesterday to the customs and immigration services to prevent any German nationals from leaving the United States "pending further instructions" was characterized as one more move in a general plan to tighten control over the 5,000,000 aliens now here, as well as over the entrance of thousands more, many of whom describe themselves as refugees from German-occupied territories.

There was a quick repercussion in Germany from the state department's request, made Monday, for withdrawal of consular officials of the Reich from this country. Without divulging details of the German reply, DNB, official Nazi news agency, announced that the Reich had rejected the American charges of subversive activities as "unfounded and despotic" and had made "the sharpest protest" against the action.

The immediate objective of yesterday's order barring departure of Germans from the United States, official sources said, was to make sure that no German national attempted to evade the White House proclamation "freezing" European funds in the United States.

At the same time, it was pointed out in official quarters, the new restrictions make it possible for the United States to control the movement of Germans into Mexico and other Latin American republics.

ASKS TELEPHONE RATE REDUCTION

Ohio Bell Proposal Goes to Commission, Would End Report Charges.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Authority to establish new intrastate long distance rates estimated to save Ohioans $345,000 a year was asked of the state utilities commission today by the Ohio Bell Telephone company.

The reductions, almost exclusively on person-to-person calls—would apply principally to overtime and report charges. The application asked that the new schedule become operative July 10—efefctive date for reduced interstate rates announced June 4 by the federal communications commission.

Rondalph Eide, company president, predicted that the combined new tolls would cut approximately $845,000 annually from Ohio's telephone bill.

In conformity with the interstate order, the new schedule for within-the-state calls would eliminate report charges—averaging 10 to 25 cents in Ohio—on uncompleted person-to-person calls, and cut overtime tolls to the same rate charged for more than three minutes on station-to-station comunication.

Eide said that more than $230,000 a year would be saved under the overtime provision, and approximately $78,000 by banning the report charge. The remaining cut would result from a minor revision of mileage rates.

The inter-state slash was ordered two months after the FCC opened an investigation of long distance charges, and five days before hearings were scheduled to open.

PROMOTER FACES NEW TRIAL IN CROWN HILL CEMETERY PROJECT

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—The promotion trial that enriched Christian W. Beck today led the Clevelander to trial a second time on federal charges of fraud in promoting the elaborate Crown Hill cemetery at nearby Twinsburg.

Indicted April 1, 1940, with 19 associates, Beck is accused of using the mails to fleece cemetery lot investors by promising their money would be doubled in two years.

Crown Hill, located on the Cleveland-Akron road, sold lots throughout the country. Thirty investors from Michigan and Pennsylvania told the federal grand jury of exchanging stocks, bonds, bank passbooks and whisky certificates for lots on the promise the property would be sold for them at a profit.

Assistant U. S. District Attorney Jerome N. Curtis said Beck and his associates also misled prospective purchases by "giving them the impression they were buying full lots instead of half lots."

Beck, promoter of everything from oil wells to superspeed ocean freighters, was investigated by the securities and exchange commission, county sheriffs, the Ohio securities division and federal income tax agents before U. S. postal inspectors brought about his indictment on fraud charges.

A year ago the Cleveland speculator and 13 associates were convicted in the Chicago federal court of swindling 500 Crown Hill investors of $200,000. Beck was sentenced to a five year penitentiary term but appealed and has been at liberty under $5,000 bond.

On trial with Beck are four officials and salesmen of the First Refunding corporation, the U. S. Research bureau and the Capital corporation, firms organized as selling affiliates of the Crown Hill development.

Goaded by derisive remarks of the police, Crafton finally mounted the cycle and gave a commendable performance in front of the Municipal building. The police were so overcome with awe that they failed to notice a mementary buckling of the service director's knees as he completed his performance.

PLAN TO PLACE RING OF STEEL ON HEMISPHERE

Would Use Lease-Lend to Give Millions In Aid to 21 Republics.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — State department quarters today disclosed that the United States government is actively seeking to establish an American defense line around Latin-America to protect the southern end of the western hemisphere from any foreign attack.

Diplomatic discussions are under way with practically all of the 20 Latin-American republics with a view to extending several hundreds of millions of dollars worth of aid to those countries under the lease-lend act to help strengthen their coastal defenses on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Representing the most far-reaching step ever taken in peace time for the protection of the South American continent, the American defense line plan envisages the establishment of a virtual ring of American steel around Latin America in the form of anti-aircraft batteries and long range coastal guns.

It also calls for the development of a ring of air bases around Latin America from which American-built naval patrol planes would maintain a constant vigil of the sea approaches to the southern end of this hemisphere.

Squadrons of American-built bomber and fighter planes also would be stationed on these air bases for quick action against any European or Pacific power that attempted to attack the American hemisphere by air or sea.

The guns and planes would be manned by American-trained native soldiers and aviators, but the air bases would be placed at the immediate disposal of the American air force in event of an actual threat to this hemisphere by any foreign power.

Use of the air bases is one of the chief concessions the United States government is asking in return for its willingness to extend lease-lend aid to the Latin republics.

The move now under way to "loan" Brazil approximately $90,000,000 worth of defense materials in return for the use of Brazilian air bases in case of emergency is part of the American defense line plan.

The Brazilian arrangement calls for the development of 11 new air bases in the northeastern section of that country, dominating the nearest approach to this hemisphere from Africa.

This government also is prepared to help finance the construction of air bases in Latin America under the lease-lend act as well as to supply defense materials.

The Latin American countries in which this country wants the use of bases in case of emergency include Mexico, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Venezuela, Brazil, Uruguay, Argentina, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia and Chile.

Play Chosen for 1st Production of Children's Theater

"Master Pierre Patelin," will be the first of the three main productions to be staged by the Children's theater this season, Harold McCuen, director, announced today.

Production of this adaptation from the French by Merritt Stone is scheduled for the first week in July. It will be followed by Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," the last of July.

The third and final production, "The Magic Melody," Ruth Pollen's play based on the life of Mozart as a youth will be presented the second week in August.

Rehearsals began yesterday for the first workshop production to be staged Friday night, June 27, at South park, where the Children's theater launched its classes for the third season this week.

The performance will include the two prize-winning plays by young Mansfield writers, whose work received the decision of the judges in a play-writing contest sponsored by the Children's theater board the past season.

They are: "The Golden Key," by Billy Gandert and George Porterfield, and "The Open Hearth," by Betty Gibson.

I call him the Meanderin' Mehock because on the one day we play golf together he is wandering around the course even worse that I am. and most of the time we are so far apart that it takes a view halloo, and few whoops and a holler for us to establish communications.

I'm a bit put out about Harry at that. The only guy I can beat at this golf game, and he leaves town for the summer. Joltin' Johnny Cindric, the Lima Panda home run clouter, finally got his degree from Findlay college last Sunday, and I understand he won't be among us for long.

I don't know how true it is, but the story's out that Johnny has had several offers to play in higher class ball than D-league, and that his contract with Lima leaves him a free agent when and if he wishes to sign with a higher club. And that he was just waiting to get out of college.

Chinny Chappie Geygan is taking his share of bows in Fremont these days as his Green Sox lead the pack in the Ohio State league pennant chase.

Chappie started the season with a team that didn't look like much, and it didn't take him long to find it out. Frank DeFrane is now the only pitcher on the staff who was with the Sox for the opener, and he appears on the way out. And only four of today's Green Hose were around for the opening game —Fred Gerken, Cince Oddo, Joe Hausman and Hank Miesle.

If-you-haven't-gottem-go-and-gettem Geygan he was known as in those days.

Chuck LeCrone is giving up the task of directing the Tiffin Mud Hens on the field and is returning to the front office as business manager.

Harry Taylor, former Toledo first sacker, takes over the management of the club on the diamond.

Meanwhile the Fostoria Red Birds have dipped into high school ranks to sign 18-year-old Flinger Jack Shope, just graduated at Springfield.

Some Mansfield fans think some strengthening should be done here, but let the Braves get over their present injury streak and they should do all right.

ATHLETIC SUPPLIES PLAY AT DELAWARE

The Athletic Supplies will attempt to return to the win column tonight as they tackle the Mansfield Tires in an Independent league tilt at John's Park. Ray Bush will be on the mound for the Supplies.

The Supplies will trek to Delaware to meet the City League All-Star team under the arcs Thursday evening.

Vic Phitzenmayer will start on the hill in the feature game of the benefit program.

Players making the trip are requested to report to the store at 6 p. m.

Indians Gain on Yankees

Get Breathing Spell With Win Over A's.

By JUDSON BAILEY

THIS is the only eastern trip all season in which the Cleveland Indians do not have to tackle the dangerous New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox in succession.

The schedule for this particular jaunt has the Tribe travelling from New York to Philadelphia to Washington to Boston—Manager Roger Peckinpaugh is a mighty happy man about it today.

The Indians lost three straight in New York to the Yankees, saw their American league lead shaved to a single game, and were staggering on the edge of a precipice when they left the big town. They probably would have been easy prey for the roaring Red Sox.

Instead they got a breathing spell last night against the Athletics. Although it was what might be termed a short breath, they came out with a 3-2 victory and gained another full game on the Yankees, whose eight-game winning streak was snapped.

The Indians wormed their way to a victory when Phil Marchildon wild-pitched the winning run across in the eighth. Hal Trosky, who had been in a batting slump, hit a homer for one of Cleveland's other runs.

Another benefit of this segment of the schedule is that it will allow Bob Feller to face every eastern club this trip, the first time he has been able to do it in regular turn since he has been with the Tribe. Feller will pitch today.

The defeat of the Yankees was an 8-7 decision handed down by the Chicago White Sox. There were 20 hits in the game and all of them except a homer by Charley Keller were singles Joe DiMaggio extended his hitting streak to 30 games

The Boston Red Sox and Detroit Tigers divided a double-header The Red Sox scored eeight runs in the seventh to take the first game, 14-6. and Detroit retaliated with two four-run frames in the nightcap to win, 8-5.

Mort Cooper regained his winning stride with a six-hit performance as the St. Louis Cardinals pummeled the Phillies, 11-3, thus maintaining the Redbirds' firm hold on the National league lead despite a 7-6 10-inning victory by the Brooklyn Dodgers over the Chicago Cubs.

Carl Hubbell coasted to a 6-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates when the wildness of Rip Sewell helped the New York Giants pile up a five-run lead in the first three innings. The Cincinnati Reds hopped on Art Johnson for four runs in the first inning and gave Paul Derringer easy sailing to a 5-3 verdict over theh Boston Braves, although he gave 10 hits

M'NEILL TO MEET BADMINTON CHAMP

CHICAGO—(AP)—Dave Freeman of Pasadena, Calif., the national badminton champion, is better than fair at tennis, too, but he faced an unenviable task today in the third round of the national clay courts tournament.

Freeman's third-round opponent was Don McNeill of Gambier, O., the defending clay courts titleholder and the country's ranking amateur player Still coasting along, McNeill won yesterday from Gerald Crowther of Hermosa Beach, Calif., with the loss of only seven games.

Pace Turns In No-Hit Victory

Young Hurler Shines In Junior Circuit.

Hurling hitless ball in the opening Junior Baseball league tilt yesterday, Pace of the Giants set down the luckless Cards 7-0 at the Fairground. The Braves set back the Indians 8-7 in the other tilt.

* * *

Pace struck out 12 and walked three in the afternoon's set-to. The Giants got only scattered hits from the Card's Bender. Thomas, Cronover and Flora led the Giants at bat with one out of three apiece.

* * *

Bender struck out nine and walked seven in the five inning struggle.

The Braves came from behind with runs in the fourth and fifth to set down the Indians 8-7. The Indians opening salvos in the second and third innings that collected seven runs was not enough to stop the Braves who kept going to cinch the game in the last of the fifth.

Games scheduled for Saturday in the league are: Giants vs. Yankees, 9 a. m.; Indians vs. Cards, 10 a. m; Giants vs. Braves, 1 p. m., and Indians vs. Dodgers, 2 p. m.

Louis and Conn Draw Biggest Fight Crowd In Three Years

By GALE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—The biggest, richest prizefight crowd since the second Louis - Schmeling battle three summers ago will surge into the Polo grounds tonight to watch Joe Louis defend his heavyweight championship against clever Billy Conn of Pittsburgh.

* * *

The big champion's 18th defense of his title promised to draw more than 40,000 and to gross approximately $400,000, as compared with the $1,000,000 that flowed into Promoter Mike Jacobs' treasury the night Louis crushed Max Schmeling, the man he hated, in less than a round.

* * *

The most popular opinion was that something very much like that was due to happen tonight to Conn, though the 23-year-old challenger had plenty of supporters. The odds against the former lightheavyweight king were lengthened steadily in the Broadway marts. Last night it was possible to get odds of 7 to 2 against his winning, and one commission man estimated he would be offering a solid 4-to-1 against Billy by nightfall.

Five special trains from Pittsburg and a half-dozen others from scattered cities poured fans into town this morning. Boston fans were known to have chartered 20 planes.

Joe and Billy—the big, deadly-punching brown man and the slim, handsome young gamecock—will square off for their 15-rounder at about 9 p. m. (EST.) In the outside event of rain they will put it off until tomorrow night. The best information is that the referee will not be Arthur Donovan, who. unfortunately for him, has become known as Louis' "house referee." A good guess is that Billy Cavanagh. West Point boxing instructor, will be the third man.

This will be the first heavyweight title fight at the Polo grounds since the famous roughhouse between Jack Dempsey and Louis Angel Firpo back in the "golden age" of boxing. And it will be Conn's first outdoor appearance here, his other bouts having been staged in Madison Square Garden.

The official weigh-in was expected to show Louis packing an advantage of about 25 pounds.

* * *

Like everything else that could be said about Conn, however, this also could be said for Louis. The bomber has been on edge for several days, anxious to get the box he thinks "talks too much." He expects to stop Billy in two or three rounds. This observer, being conservative, favors the latter figure.

Braves Wallop Fostoria, Meet Birds In Lions' Charity Twin Bill Tonight

Holds Foe to 4 Hits. Best Game of Season, Holds Foe to 4 Hits.

JIM COLEMAN turned in his best hurling stint of the season for the Mansfield Braves last night at Fostoria, and the Braves got back on the victory path with an 8 to 3 decision.

* * *

Wildness of the Red Bird tossers, Cassell and Shislla, helped the Braves to an easy verdict, as they made only five hits compared to four the Birds collected off Coleman.

* * *

Nine bases on balls, one hit batsman, and two wild pitches were contributed by the charitable Fostoria flingers, while Coleman was dishing out four franks to first and hitting two batters.

Mansfield got away to an early six run lead, scoring twice in the second and four times in the third inning.

In the second Moore, Mangan and Wolpert walked to lead off. After Siegbert fanned for the first out, Coleman scored Moore with a single, and Ankrum was hit by a pitched ball forcing Mangan across the platter with the second run. Morse and Salem fanned.

Mutryn strolled leading off in the fourth. Moore fanned, but Mangan singled and took second on Pruett's error in right field. Wolpert was safe on an error by Third Baseman Ross, and Mutryn scored. Siegbert got a life on Cassell's error, Mangan scoring. Coleman and Ankrum walked, sending Wolpert across the plate. Siegbert tallied on a long fly to left by Dick Morse. Salem flied to right for the final out.

The Braves chalked up their final two runs in the ninth when Salem walked and stole second, and trotted home on Eddie Mutryn's long circuit clout over the left field fence.

* * *

Coleman fanned 11 Fostoria batters while nine Braves went down on strikes.

Golfers Tear Course Apart

Low Scores Rules In A-League; Record Set.

The boys were really pattin' that pellet around last evening in the News-Journal A league out at Possum Run.

* * *

Johnny Carr shoots a 34, and loses. Pete Linster, Joe Mayer and Al Kushin shoot 35's and lose. And Al Hager shoots a par 36, and loses.

* * *

So the boys they were playing must have been shooting some golf too. They were! Grant Hanawalt turned in a 33 to beat Carr's 34, Vin Tipul scored a 34 against Linster's 35, Pete Zeides checked in with a 33 to shade Mayer's 35. Rollie Rachel tied Kushin's 35, and won in one extra hole, and Frank Cipris banged out a 35 to beat Hager's 36.

Joe Kasper also turned in a sparkling 33, good enough to win over Gene Zediker's 39.

And that wasn't all the golf that had the A-leaguers chattering last night.

* * *

F. Jocha and Johnny Kleshinski set a new record for extra hole matches for the 10-year-old league when they battled through eight extra holes before Jocha sank the winning putt.

* * *

Paul Jesson went three extra holes before winning from B. Scott.

Long Bar scored three points to retain first place in the league with a 17 total, while Sloan's Drugs blanked Andregg's Billiards and jumped into second place, one point off the pace.

Al Sauer Meets Tough Clevelander at Ashland.

ASHLAND—Mansfield boys will have big parts in the amateur boxing show to be staged at the fairground Coliseum Friday night, June 20, by the Ashland Athletic club.

Al Sauer, Mansfield's crack light heavyweight, will meet Tommy Blue of Cleveland in a five-round co-feature bout. Blue is a former Florida state middleweight champion. He has had only 37 fights, but has lost only six of them.

* * *

Ernie McKinley of Ashland will meet Sammy Derrico of Cleveland in the feature bout. McKinley has come out of retirement for this one and has a tough customer to test out his comeback ability. Derrico is Cleveland Golden Glove featherweight champion. He was a semi-finalist in the national amateur tournament at Boston, losing to Francis Leonard, who won the championship.

Leonard Waddell of Mansfield will meet Carl Netzel of Cleveland. Netzel was runner-up for the bantamweight championship in the novice division of the Cleveland Golden Gloves.

Bob Garber of Mansfield meets Warren Strine of Ashland, who was Marion Golden Gloves champion in his first tournament.

Graham Armstrong of Cleveland and Joe Colatruglio of Tiffin are on for a three-round heavyweight bout. Both are former football fullbacks, Armstrong at John Carroll U. and Colatruglio at Tiffin Calvert High.

Bob Wertman of Ashland and Floyd Kemp of Loudonville will meet in a replay of their match in a Mansfield tournament. Kemp lost a split decision and challenged Wertman to another bout.

Eight bouts are planned, all under A. A. U. supervision.

Softball Loop Plays 4 Games

Yunckers, Westies, Tires And B'Nai Brith Win.

The Commercial A league swung into action last night as Yuncker's took Barnes into camp 8-5; Westinghouse shelled the Safety Cabs 8-2; B'nai B'rith clouted the Smoke Shop 7-4, and the Mansfield Tires subdued the Farm Tools 11-7.

Horvath, Karminski and E. Bates sparkled with the ash for Barnes while Wallace came out of the fray with a .500 percentage for the winning Yunckers.

Hummel, H. Rose and Boko took two out of three at bat for the winning Westinghouse club. G. Rudolph and Judy sparked the Safety Cabs with two out of four.

Lerner led the B'nai B'rith club with two out of three, while Stinehour was doing the same for the Smoke Shop. The B. B. club took advantage of its nine hits to collect seven runs. The Smoke Shop made only four runs out of their eight hits.

Swank had a perfect evening at bat for the Farm Tools as his club went down 11-7 before the Mansfield Tires. Swank made two out of two. The Tires took only five hits from Heston, but eight errors by the Toolmen left Heston on the short end of the score.

Outsider Takes English Derby

Owen Tudor Wins By Length And Half.

NEWMARKET, England—(AP)—Owen Tudor, an outsider at 25 to 1 won the 261st running of England's derby today with Morogoro, a favorite, second, and Firoze Din third.

* * *

Owen Tudor won cleverly over the mile and a half route by a length and a half. It was the seventh derby win for his trainer, Fred Darling.

* * *

The Duke of Westminster's Lambert Simnel, the top favorite, who went to the post at four to one, finished outside the money.

Perfect June weather warmed the dog-leg Newmarket course for the running of the classic, the second of this war.

Owen Tudor's time was 2 minutes, 32 seconds.

In spite of the war and the substitution of Newmarket for Epsom Downs, a holiday mood prevailed. It appeared the Britisher took the attitude he had a right to enjoy his derby, regardless of Hitler.

Epsom Downs is the home of the derby, but the government moved it to Newmarket last year just as it did during the World war.

Although betting was not on the scale of former years, there was plenty of money around. The king had no horse in the derby, but ran his Merry Wanderer in the opening event, the Royston Handicap.

The post-time odds on Morogoro were 11 to 2 and on Firoze Din 100 to 1.

Lambert Simmel, which won the recent 2,000 guineas and therefore was favored to win, never contended for the lead.

The Tower of London once housed a menagerie.

Conn Challenged By Girl's Papa

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—Disclosure that Billy Conn and his pretty blond sweetheart have applied for a marriage license threatened today to break up any plans they might have had to elope soon after his battle tonight in New York with Joe Louis for the heavyweight championship.

Register Walter Evans in the little town of Brookville, about 70 miles northeast of Pittsburgh, said Conn and Mary Louise Smith applied for a license there last week. Conn gave his name as William David Conn, age 23, and Miss Smith said she was 21.

Jimmy Smith, former major league baseball player and husky father of the girl, quickly registered his opposition to the union, declaring:

"Champion or no champion, I'll punch hell out of that fellow and he'd probably be the first one to say I could do it. I hope he wins, but I want him to stay away from my family."

Miss Smith disappeared. Her father said she was with him and "there won't be any marriage because she's only 18."

JULY 4TH TIRE SALE

SALE ENDS MIDNIGHT, JULY 5TH

HERE'S WHY YOU SHOULD BUY SILVERTOWNS NOW

1 YOUR TIRES MAY HAVE TO LAST A LONG, LONG TIME!
No one in America can tell you today what the rubber situation will be in a few months. If you invest in a quality tire now—you may be very thankful for its extra miles some day soon.

2 DEFENSE REQUIREMENTS TAKE MORE AND MORE RUBBER!
Our modern army rolls on rubber. It should have—and does have—first call on our rubber supplies. As less and less rubber becomes available for civilian use, drastic changes in tire qualities and prices may be necessary.

3 NEW TAXES, HIGHER COSTS, MAY COME SOON!
Everyone who reads a paper knows that taxes, wages, and material costs are constantly rising. No one objects to these necessary increases. But neither can anyone foresee what they may be tomorrow, or how much they may raise tire prices.

4 YOU HELP CONSERVE AMERICA'S VITAL RUBBER SUPPLY.
Almost as much rubber goes into a cheap, bargain-built tire as into a Silvertown. But the rubber in a Silvertown goes farther. You get these extra miles—and you actually help prevent rubber waste, and help conserve America's rubber.

5 EVERY SILVERTOWN CARRIES A LIFETIME GUARANTEE!
This is how B. F. Goodrich guarantees each Silvertown. You cannot lose a penny, due to any defect of construction. Since your new tires may have to last a long, long time—your investment is safer in a tire that carries a lifetime guarantee.

6 DURAMIN GIVES YOU MANY EXTRA MILES.
Duramin—sometimes called the "tire vitamin"—is the amazing combination of chemicals that actually keeps rubber lively and young, makes every Silvertown wear longer. It is an extra bonus of mileage and safety, at no extra cost.

OUR COMMANDER TIRE is a full-dimension, heavy tread tire. We sincerely believe it is the best tire in its price field. Obviously, it is not the best tire money can buy. No tire at this price can give you the mileage and extra safety you would expect from a Silvertown. In ordinary times, we have advised many people of limited income to buy the Commander. Today, however, the tires you buy may have to last you much longer than you ever expected. That's why we think it will pay you to step clear out of this "bargain price" field—and step up to Silvertowns.

MODERATE RISE MOVES THROUGH MARKET TODAY

Progress of British Drives Seen as Aiding Upturn In Brisk Dealings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A moderate, but general, rising movement extended throughout the stock market today. Gains of major fractions to more than a point were recorded in every classification toward the second hour on the basis of fairly brisk dealings.

Chief gainers included U. S. Steel, Youngstown, Douglas, United Aircraft, Westinghouse, American Smelting, and Pennsylvania railroad.

Aiding the upturn, in the minds of commentators, was the progress of British campaigns in the Near East and against the "invasion ports" and further clarifications of American government intentions in the defense program.

Interest in shipbuilding stocks was heightened by the OPM order giving shipbuilding companies the highest priority rating, A-1-A, in place of the A-1-C rating previously held, on orders for ship construction materials.

THEATERS

"Wings" Held Over.

Held over through Friday by popular demand, "I Wanted Wings," showing at the Ohio presents millions of dollars worth of equipment placed at the disposal of Paramount by the Army Air Corps. Location shooting was done at Randolph, Kelly and March Fields and the famed Flying Fortress was even loaned for the production. Only with the help of the army was the depicting of a bombing raid on Los Angeles and a blackout made possible. Featured in this thrilling production were Ray Milland, Constance Moore, William Holden, Brian Donlevy, Wayne Morris and Veronica Lake.

Scattergood Feature.

Frowning upon the theory that rural communities do not foster sophisticates, "Scattergood Pulls the Strings," opening today at the Madison, proposes to show that the youth of smaller towns is just as apt to be worldly-wise as his urban cousin. Consequently it is not correct to depict them as proverbial hayseeds Guy Kibbee is cast again as the sage of Coldriver who couches his philosophy in the jargon of a rural storekeeper. Susan Peters and James Corner carry the romantic interest Emma Dunn and Bobs Watson are in the cast. "There's Magic in Music," the coattraction, has Allan Jones, Susanna Foster and Margaret Lindsay.

Horror Bill.

A double-horror bill will hold sway at the Ritz beginning Thursday. Ellen Drew is featured in both productions, "The Mad Doctor," with Basil Rathbone and John Howard, and "The Monster and the Girl," casting Robert Paige and Paul Lukas. Murder mysteries are woven through each picture.

Chaplin Speaks.

Charlie Chaplin's "The Great Dictator," opens Thursday at the Park with the clown of the silent screen speaking at last, first in the role of a little European barber, wanting only peace, and then as the raving, ranting ruler of a dictatorship. Jack Oakie as the rival dictator, "Napoloni," and Henry Daniell as Chaplin's dictator aide, "Garbitsch," support the star. Paulette Goddard furnishes the romantic note and the cast includes Maurice Moscovich and Billy Gilbert. "The Trail Blazers," with the "Three Mesquiteers," is the second feature.

★ It's true! RIGHT NOW is the time to buy that better car cheaper! Here are the reasons why! Today's prices on new Ford cars are so low that folks are trading in cars that they would ordinarily drive much longer. AND we're still holding down our used car prices to figures so low that we can't promise to keep them there much longer! A word to the wise is—BUY NOW!

Plymouth Girl Married to Vanderbilt-Whitney Scion

at Philadelphia, from whom he was separated early in 1940. Their divorce was granted this year.

Officiating at the ceremony today was Rev. Richard C. Wolf, pastor of the Plymouth church. The bridesmaid was Miss Katharine Searle, niece of the bride. Roscoe H. Channing, jr., of New York City, was best man, and John A. Root, Plymouth, lifelong friend of the bride, played the wedding music.

In the wedding party were Dr. and Mrs. George J. Searle, parents of the bride; Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney of New York, the groom's mother; Dr. and Mrs. G. J. Searle of Mansfield; Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Fenner of Cleveland, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Root of Plymouth, and a few other close friends of the family.

Mr. Whitney and Miss Searle obtained their marriage license about 10:30 a. m. today in Richland county probate court. They had arranged several days ahead to obtain the license without the usual five-day waiting period.

When they applied for their license, Miss Searle was wearing a black suit, red hat, and black shoes. Mr. Whitney wore a light sport jacket, dark trousers, and a wide-brimmed straw hat. He gave his age as 42 and Miss Searle's as 32.

Mrs. Ruth McCammon, deputy clerk, who issued the license, said the couple was very amiable. They talked with her and Mrs. Mary Depler, another clerk, about the weather and the ideal day for the ceremony.

For the wedding ceremony the bride wore a gown of delicate pink organza of Victorian simplicity. The fitted bodice and wide skirt were fashioned over matching taffeta and full sleeves from a dropped shoulder line were caught at the wrist with a narrow band of pink ribbon with a ruffle over the hand. A filmy lace veil in a rose pattern was worn over her hair and fell softly around her shoulders.

She carried a rose point lace handkerchief which belonged to her maternal grandmother. Her bridal bouquet was an Irene Hayes arrangement of stephanotis centered with a few sweetheart roses. Her gown was designed by Thomas Charles Pratt, of New York, one of America's leading designers.

The bridesmaid's dress was of ceil blue organdy fashioned with a long full skirt, with narrow sash of pink velvet ribbon. She carried a bouquet of sky blue delphinium and sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Searle, sr., wore a gown of soft gray chiffon, with a flower hat of petal pink. The bridegroom's mother wore a crepe-de-chine gown of pastel lilac with a matching hat and corsage of stephanotis and sweetheart roses.

Mrs. Whitney's going-away costume consisted of a green and white tailored print dress with a matching jacket and white accessories.

Immediately following the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. George James Searle, jr., brother and sister-in-law of the bride, gave a wedding dinner at their home in Mansfield, and later in the afternoon the couple departed for a wedding trip to the west.

The bride attended Southern college in Lakeland, Fla., and later studied arts, music and languages at Columbia University, New York. She continued her musical studies with Madame Ella Toedt, of New York, and also under Marie Guy Zenatello, noted operatic coach. She has been widely heard on the concert stage.

Mrs. Whitney has specialized in oratorio and church music, having had her first experience as a singer and director in the choir of the Plymouth church. She inherits her interest in church music from her great grandfather, Felix Fenner, who was born in Bethlehem, Pa., in 1788 and was organist in the Great Moravian church there. He moved to Plymouth in 1832, where the family has resided for more than a century.

The bride's father, Dr. Searle, a graduate of the medical school of Boston college, served two years as mayor of Plymouth.

A descendant of one of the oldest families in America, Mr. Whitney is the son of the late Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, one of America's foremost sculptresses. The Whitney ancestry traces back to Isaiah Whitney, who migrated from England to the States in the 1760's. His grandfather, William C. Whitney, was secretary of the navy under President Cleveland.

Before graduating from Yale, Mr. Whitney devoted most of his time to outdoor sports, having played on various school athletic teams and rowed on the Yale varsity crew.

Shortly after his graduation in 1922 he went to work for a mining company of which Mr. Channing, his best man, was president. Working with Mr. Channing, an internationally-known mining engineer, the two developed the now famous Flin Flon mine of the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting company in Manitoba, Canada, of which Mr. Channing is now president and Mr. Whitney chairman of the board.

After the death of his father, Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, in 1930, Mr. Whitney took over his great racing stable and for three years was the leading winner on American tracks.

He was recently re-elected chairman of the board of Pan American Airways, which he helped to found in 1927, and is also president of the American Arbitration association, a non-profit organization of leading business men throughout the country. He is a director of the Metropolitan Opera company and American Museum of Natural History in New York City.

He saw service in the last World war as a second lieutenant and was the youngest flying instructor in the Army Air corps.

Lend-Lease Voyage

Action Stations at Dawn!

(Editor's Note: Here is the second in a series of eye-witness accounts of what happens to a lend-lease war vessel after it becomes a fighting unit of the British navy.)

* * * * *

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
(AP Feature Service Writer)

ABOARD H. M. S.—, AT SEA—A British sailor in dripping oil skins thrust open the door of my cabin, snapped on the light.

"Four A. M. sir. ACTION STATIONS!"

And he was gone.

In a few moments I heard the clatter of running feet on deck; muffled orders.

When I reached the bridge, I saw nothing unusual in the murky darkness. It had been raining, but now it was clear and dark. Nobody excited. No orders flying about. Just tense silence, as if we were waiting for something. In a few moments a sun still invisible cast a pale white light over the water to the east. It happened quickly as if a giant curtain had been raised. Before us, I could see clearly to the eastward. Back of us to the west, it was still black—blacker than night by contrast.

On the decks below, I now could see the crew of our ship. Every man aboard was on duty, at attention, ready for immediate action.

I was to learn soon what this all meant, and to understand from what I saw how the Hood and the Bismarck could have hit each other in a five-minute action at sea in the murky light of the dawn.

As soon as it became light, and the sun climbed to the horizon, the crew retired, some to duties, some to sleep. The tension lessened, except on the watchful bridge. All seemed to be normal once more.

What It Means.

"What," I asked our commander, "is this action stations business?"

"Dawn," he replied, "is the most dangerous moment in every 24 hours at sea. It lights the eastern side of you in a matter of seconds. Objects at sea suddenly become visible. Our ship and the enemy might be cruising within a few hundred yards of each other all night, without spotting each other. But we would be revealed to each other at the instant of dawn. The crew with their hands on the trigger is the crew that survives, much as your wild westerners survived because they were fast on the draw. It's a common practice in all navies in wartime."

I was learning things about navies aboard this lend-lease craft I had boarded the night before in New York. I had learned that warships not only have automatic blackout systems, but use canvas to double their protection against a chance peep of light. And soon I was to understand how they were ever alert, yes, even when they were observing the English ritual of tea.

How To See New York.

Below in the ward room we were soon comparing notes and customs.

A reserve officer with a handsome chiselled face, and keen blue eyes was bubbling over with enthusiasm for American women, for Philadelphia and New York.

"Ah, your women," he said. "And New York. Clean. Beautiful. On my last day in the States, I had a last long look from one of your tall buildings with a tall cool glass in my hand."

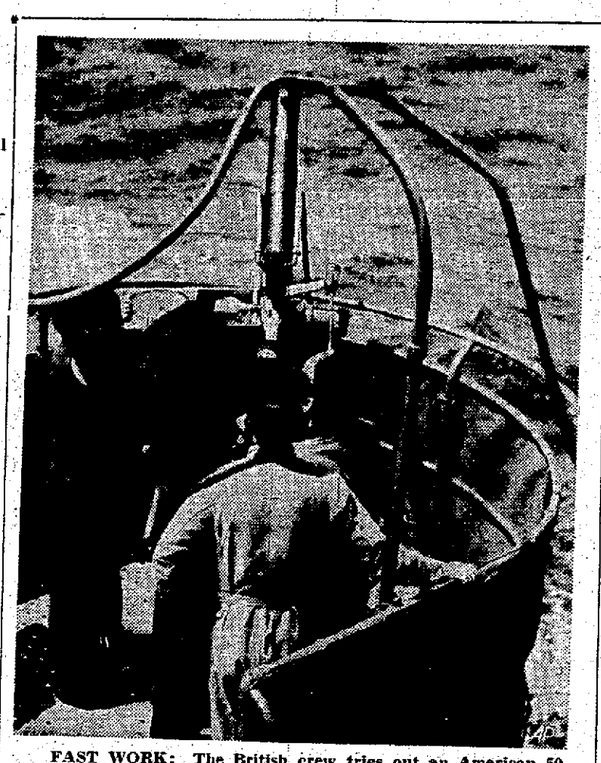
Above decks, all was business. Constant oiling, cleaning, investigating. One day I ran across the executive officer with a big ring of seamen around him.

"We've never fired these American guns," he was saying, "so I'll explain."

After 10 or 15 minutes demonstration and discussion he asked if there were any questions. There were none. A gun crew stepped forward. Ammunition passed.

"Ready! Fire!"

Several times in quick succession our English crew let go with an American big gun they had never seen before, and quickly as if they had been doing the job all their lives. Then they cleaned her up again, oiled her some more, with all the care that Mrs. Smith would give her pet pekinese.



FAST WORK: The British crew tries out an American 50-calibre machine gun designed to fight low-flying airplanes. "The lend-lease ships bristle with these guns," Beatty writes. "The officer spent 10 minutes with the crew, and the sailors manned the gun as if they had been used to it all their lives."

An officer patted one of our 3-inch anti-aircraft weapons.

"Nice gun," he volunteered. "I want to be there when she cracks a Jerry bomber on the nose."

Getting Acquainted.

Our senior officer present put the squadron through all the paces he could think of. Within 24 hours, our engineer knew what his power would do, and how it would do it. Gun crews, depth bombers, cooks, signalmen, electricians knew what all their new gadgets would do, where every wire led, every speaking tube.

The engineer, for one, was amazed at the speed he could get out of a single engine.

The commanding officer was enthusiastic, too.

'Top line, these ships," he told me.

PLANT FACING THIRD STRIKE

Cafeteria Workers Threaten Walkout at Ravenna Arsenal Site.

(By International News Service)

RAVENNA—The U. S. army's $49,000,000 arsenal now under construction at Wayland and scheduled to begin manufacture of shells by July 1 was threatened today with the third strike since construction started several months ago.

This time, 143 workers in the ordnance plant's cafeteria are seeking a cut in working hours from 54 to 48 and a blanket 20 per cent wage increase.

Backing their demands, the hotel and restaurant workers and Bartenders union No. 118 last night voted unanimously to support a strike, but Mrs. Ruth Raleigh, union business agent, said the strike would be held up until negotiations with the Hunkin - Conkey Construction company, contractor at the plant, were completed.

Officials of the construction company announced after settlement of a strike of common laborers a few weeks ago that work on the plant would be stopped and operations moved to another site unless unions first sought negotiati. of their demands before a strike was called. A strike of carpenters paralyzed work at the arsenal a short time before the laborers struck.

ORE SHIPMENTS BREAK RECORDS

Total Passing Toledo Docks In May Highest Reported.

TOLEDO—(U.P.)—Iron ore shipments through Toledo docks set a new all-time monthly record during May, Clare B. Tefft, chamber of commerce transportaion commissioner, said today.

A total of 462,486 tons of ore were unloaded at the docks compared with 207,677 tons in April and 246,468 tons in May, 1940, he said. The increased volume of ore was accompanied by a decrease in lake coal shipments, which Tefft said was due to a speedup in ore shipments with many boats returning empty to the ore mines.
